Labatt's Lays Off

Labatt's Victoria brewery will start laying off employees later today as the operation begins a shutdown caused by an informational picket line blocking its driveway.

The layoffs will start with the beer delivery truck drivers — six drivers and three helpers — but could extend to the rest of the 100 employees "as we run out of items to put beer into," Labatt's spokesman Brice Thom said today.

The picket line, comprised of Nanaimo area hotel owners and a few industry workers, has stopped the delivery of beer from the brewery and the delivery of glass bottles to the brewery since it was put up Tuesday morning.

The hotelmen are protesting the forced closure of many up-island hotels because of the beer distributors' strike.

Labatt's has applied to the Labor Relations Board for a ruling ordering that the picket line be taken away from the driveway entrances to the plant.

Thom said he expected some legal action on the application by Tuesday or Wednesday next week.

"We're not asking that the line be removed all together — it's only an information line, but we want legal action to clear the driveways," Thom said.

He said between 10 and 15 sign-carrying pickets walk up an down in front of the entrances, about three feet apart, making it impossible for the drivers to get their trucks through without injuring someone.

The pickets claimed earlier that their line is scanctioned by the Hotel and Restaurant Employees Union, but union representative Tom Luscombe told a Victoria Labor Council meeting Wednesday night the union does not endorse "that parading around down there."

The delivery halt at Labatt's is expected to close down city beer parlors by the weekend.

About eight pubs had already been closed by the beer distributors strike, and the remaining 20 were relying on direct delivery from Labatt's for their supplies.

GAS TALKS

Labor Minister Bill King has summoned both sides in the propane distributors strike to meet him today for talks.

Carl Anshelm, spokesman for Transport Labor Relations which bargains for the companies, said he has been asked to attend the meeting.

Dig-In for 3 Months, Pulp Strikers Told

By LIZ HUGHES
Times Staff

Pulp workers in B.C. are being told by their leaders to "dig in" for another two or three months of the strike that has crippled the province's major industry.

A letter sent earlier this week to members of the Kamloops local of the Pulp, Paper and Woodworkers of Canada union, urges the members to find interim employment and to hang on for at least two more months of the strike.

The same message was conveyed to the PPWC members in the Nanaimo local at a membership meeting Wednesday night, Nanaimo PPWC leader Bruce Tunstall said today.

"We're telling them it can be two or three months and there was no panic in the membership, they just said fine," Tunstall said.

"Surprisingly enough, after three months, there was good solidarity and no weakness."

The pulp workers went on strike July 16, closing down at least 90 per cent of the forest industry in B.C. Talks convened by the provincial government between the pulp unions and the industry last week broke down when neither side appeared willing to budge from their original positions.

The industry accepted recommendations made by special mediator Mr. Justice Henry Hutcheon and said it was their final position.

The unsigned letter sent to Kamloops area members said they deserve and are entitled to "something more than the Hutcheon report."

Tunstall said the letter in Kamloops was a local letter, not from the provincial office of the union. He said it was sent to Kamloops members "because so many of them have left town to find other jobs."

The main pulp mill in Kamloops was closed down for almost a month before the rest of the B.C. mills, because of a dispute over local issues.

Most other PPWC locals in the province are holding meetings this week to keep the membership informed, Tunstall said.

The letter suggested that Kamloops members "get out and get a job somewhere else and help keep yourself up and the industry down until they (the companies) are desper-

Trudeaus Welcome Third Son

OTTAWA (CP) — Margaret Trudeau gave birth today to her third son, and her husband, still a typical nervous father, told reporters that the new baby and his mother "are very well indeed."

The prime minister, who had been up until 4 a.m. — 90 minutes after the baby was born in Ottawa's Civic Hospital — said: "I am a little shaken."

Earlier, he had called friends and, as he recalled it, he announced that the new baby weighed "six pounds and nine inches."

The baby actually weighed seven pounds, 14 ounces.

The prime minister took his wife to hospital about 10 p.m. Wednesday, and Mr. Trudeau said the baby came "rather quickly."

He arrived at his Parliament Hill office today, carrying a two-foot-long wooden box filled with Royal Jamaican cigars. He was laughing and appeared excited, passing around cigars to reporters. "But don't take them all; I need some for cabinet."

Asked about a name for his new son, he said: "We have a couple we're trying to sort out."

As for the girls names they had in mind, "we're saving them for the next time."

. . . CIGARS ALL ROUND

Margaret and Pierre Trudeau's son born today may have two big brothers born Christmas Day but he won't have a tough time convincing them of the illustriousness of his Oct. 2 birthday.

Cartoon character Charlie Brown turned 25 today—and while the proud PM passed out cigars on Parliament Hill, veteran comedian Groucho Marx continued to puff stogies as he turned 85.

And in B.C., Premier David Barrett today hit 45. Arriving at work he laughed off suggestions of being over the hill and said he would telegraph congratulations to the Trudeaus.

"It will be a beautiful child," Barrett added.

Oct. 2 is also the birthday of England's King Richard III, born in 1452, and British author, Graham Greene who turned 71 today.

But more than just a day for notable birthdays, today also marks 35 years since Canada's cost-of-living index reached a record 170.7 and the 20th anniversary of Canada's Unemployment Insurance Act.

Cabinet Shuffle Rumored

Decision on a provincial cabinet shuffle was expected to be reached today during a regular cabinet session.

A cabinet source indicated before entering the cabinet chamber that changes would be discussed. He said there may not be an official announcement right away, but indications are that it will be Friday.

Premier David Barrett has consistently refused comment on speculation that cabinet changes would be announced before the fall sitting of the legislature.

But Barrett indicated during the first leg of his September tour of B.C. that he would relinquish his finance portfolio and most observers predict Agriculture Minister Dave Stupich will be given the job.

Stupich is chartered accountant and during his three years as agriculture minister the government has brought in most of its land reform and farm income programs.

It is also rumored Transport Minister Robert Strachan and Mines Minister Leo Nimsick may lose their portfolios, which would either be divided between other ministers or given to NDP backbenchers.

Kamloops MLA Don Lewis is considered a contender for the agriculture post.

Provincial Secretary Ernie Hall confirmed a new agent-general in London would be appointed this weekend, but he would not indicate who will get the job.

Rear-Admiral Michael Stirling retired from the post in June and the government has been re-evaluating the position since then.

Asked if a cabinet minister might be appointed, Hall smiled and said he could not comment.

HEALTH OFFICIALS FLUNK PHYSICAL

VANCOUVER (UPI) — A simple two-step fitness test Wednesday gave the unhappy word to scores of B.C. health officials—they're pretty poor physical specimens.

"Most of those under 40 were given a rating of minimum desirable personal fitness," said test evaluator Hugh Venables. "That means they fall into the group of average unfit Canadians of their age and sex.

"We advised them to engage in regular physical activity to move into a higher fitness level."

Hospital administrators, department heads and trustees were invited to take the test as they arrived for the opening of the three-day annual meeting of the B.C. Health Associaton.

Delegates took the test by stepping up and down two eight-inch steps for six minutes, band music paced them—faster for younger participants, slower for older ones.

Pound Nears Record $2 Low

Times News Services

LONDON — The battered and ailing British pound plunged today to its lowest level, nearing the crisis value of $2 (U.S.) for the first time in history.

Bankers and money market dealers said it could well dip below $2 by the weekend unless the Bank of England stepped in to shore it up. They said it has done so only on a minor scale so far.

Dealers blamed the pound's drop largely on reported large scale selling Wednesday by an unnamed Arab oil country, which was said to be switching reserves held here and in financial crisis-ridden New York City into French francs.

Soon after money markets opened, the pound dropped to an all time low value of $2.0270. Its "official" rate is $2.40.

Fall of the pound had little effect on the U.S. dollar on European money markets. The dollar improved slightly in Paris while gaining against the pound but was slightly lower elsewhere. French bankers predicted the dollar's recent decline was about over in view of the improvement in the U.S. economy.

The pound's dramatic nose dive meant a bonanza for American and other tourists still crowding London. It meant they now were getting nearly 20 per cent more for their dollars, deutschmarks, francs or guilders than a year ago.

FIVE KILLED IN BELFAST

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (UPI) — Five persons were shot and killed today in two separate shootings that shattered a peaceful week in Northern Ireland. Six bomb attacks hit the province within a matter of hours.

One man died and two others were seriously hurt in a bomb explosion at a photographic store on the outskirts of Belfast.

Three Roman Catholics were fatally wounded in a shooting at a wine shop in central Belfast. The manager of a protestant bar was shot dead in another incident in the city.

Four bomb attacks were reported earlier.

Supermarket Talks Started

VANCOUVER (CP) — Clive McKee, a labor relations consultant, said today that exploratory meetings are in progress in the food industry dispute, which has closed 125 Greater Vancouver supermarkets since Sept. 5.

McKee, who would not say when the talks began, said he was assisting the parties in mediation and was not acting as an industrial inquiry commissioner.

3 Killed In Bank Violence

Times News Services

MONTREAL — Two aborted bank robberies at separate branches of the Banque Canadienne Nationale ended Wednesday in the death of the two would-be robbers and a six-year-old school boy.

In a third Montreal robbery, three bandits escaped with $72,000 after using a tow-truck to smash through the rear wall of a credit union.

Six-year-old Roui Sa, held hostage with 15 classmates when their school bus was hijacked by a bank bandit, died after being shot following a police chase through city streets.

An autopsy will be performed today to determine whether the bullet that killed the boy was fired by the bandit or police.

The bandit, also killed, was identified as Denis Martel, 33.

The man, brandishing a pistol had forced the school bus driver to try to elude police in a 25-minute high-speed chase through the streets of the city's north end.

A police cruiser eventually rammed the bus head-on.

About 50 police officers, shielded behind their cars, surrounded the bus and exchanged fire with the bandit.

The family of Roui Sa Wednesday night denounced police handling of the incident in which the boy died.

"They should have let the school bus go with the bandit," said John Sa, Roui's uncle.

Plant Where Eight Died Closed for Blast Probe

BELOEIL, Que. (CP) — Canadian Industries Ltd. (CIL) officials say a special inquiry involving federal, provincial and company experts will be established to determine the cause of a massive explosion that killed eight workers and sent seven others to hospital Wednesday.

CIL works manager Allan MacKinnon said all manufacturing of explosives in the rest of the plant site, 15 miles east of Montreal, will be terminated until results of the inquiry are known.

The explosion occurred shortly before 8 p.m. EDT and could be heard for miles. It scattered debris for thousands of feet and shattered windows as far as four miles away.

Dead are Gerard Beauregard, Pierre Bernier, Alain Bedard, Pierre Fournier, Jean Ouellette, Edgar Racine and Gerard Caron. The name of an eighth victim was withheld, pending notification of next-of-kin.

Scores of people were treated for minor cuts and bruises at a special field hospital set up near the scene and area hospitals reported treating others for similar injuries caused by flying glass from shattered windows.

Fire departments from two neighboring communities along with the McMasterville fire department battled the fire for more than three hours before bringing it under control. Their job was hampered by the intense heat from the fire which shot flames 250 feet into the air.

One CIL official, who said he did not wish to be identified, estimated damage at the plant at close to $1 million. Police said estimates of damage to buildings in the shock area of the blast will not be determined for days.

Some nearby homes were shaken by the explosion.

Witnesses at the scene said it looked like a major airline disaster as police used dogs to find parts of human bodies strewn about in the darkness.

"I've seen pieces of bodies — a hand and a foot — lying in the rubble," said Jacques Tremblay, 24, a former CIL employee.

The explosion occurred in a 2,000 square-foot building, one of many in the square-mile CIL plant. The building was used in the manufacture of an explosive called cap-sensitive slurries.

"It's not as sensitive as nitroglycerine."

Dunbar said the explosive marketed by CIL under the trade name Power Mex, is generally considered stable and is commonly used as a blasting agent in mining and construction.

City Pays Six Workers $26,000 for Not Being Sick

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

The rationale of giving cash rewards to City Hall employees who stay healthy has been questioned by Victoria aldermen, but council's finance committee today recommended payment of $2,000 in accumulated sick leave benefits to six former employees.

The personnel, formerly on the city's assessment staff, were transferred to the newly-created B.C. Assessment Authority last October.

Top of the list is former city assessor Jack Ozard, who receives $7,126, and next comes his assistant, Cranston Browning, with $5,852.

Four other ex-employees get $3,473, $3,816, $2,803 and $2,935 respectively.

Ald. Bob Ellis commented that the system seems to be based on the strange assumption "that if a guy is lucky enough to remain healthy he should be paid extra for it."

Committee chairman Ald. Sam Bawlf admitted he, too, found the policy "troublesome," and added: "The accumulated amount is pretty startling."

City manager Jim Bramley explained that one of the reasons for adopting the arrangement some years ago was to "deter people from staying away who were on the borderline between healthy and sick.

He conceded that the incentive to come to work under such circumstances diminishes somewhat after the person concerned has put in his 10-year qualifying period, "but at least for the first 10 to 15 years it helps."

The option of banking sick leave and taking the cash equivalent on leaving city employment — for retirement or any other reason — is provided for in the city's collective agreements with its four major unions: police, firefighters, inside employees and outside employees.

The 30 or so senior, non-union staff also have the privilege, but some smaller unions representing only a handful of employees do not.

Sick leave is allotted on a graduated scale — 12 days per year after the first year's service, 18 days annually after the first five years and 24 after the next 15.

City personnel director Terry FitzPatrick explained after the meeting that the employees can accrue half the unused portion of their sick leave each year.

After 10 years' service, if they retire, resign or leave for any other reason, they are entitled to claim 75 per cent of the accumulated amount up to a maximum of 26 weeks or 130 working days.

The lump sum payment is made at their then-current rate of pay.

"It takes about 18 to 20 years to reach the maximum with a perfect sick leave record," FitzPatrick said.

In Ozard's case, he had actually accumulated 339 days of sick leave so he qualifies for the 130-day maximum. Seventy-five per cent of 130 times his daily rate of $73.09 produces the $7,126 total.

An Academic Question . . .

University of Victoria senator David Henn is wondering whether the university attracted more than its usual number of brilliant students during the last summer session.

He called attention to the session's annual report at the senate meeting Wednesday and pointed out "that in some courses there were far too many 'A's" awarded to students.

He made the point that "maybe the students were brilliant, or maybe the teachers were brilliant, but the standing of excellence was awarded in enough courses to cause concern."

In one education course all students got an A.

A report from the deans was requested by senate and will be considered at the next senate meeting.

"There might be a perfectly satisfactory explanation," said Henn, acting chairman of the hispanic and Italian languages departmtnt.

Henn's concerns were echoed by Dr. S. A. Jennings dean of graduate studies who said there has been a serious attrition in grading standards at UVic.

Formerly, he said, if a student got a B average he stood in the top third of the class. But the rule does not seem to apply to summer school, he said.

He said the deans' report should consider this "serious deterioration."

Labor Board Ruling Prejudiced: Pollen

Mayor Peter Pollen has sent a strongly-worded letter to Paul Weiler, chairman of the provincial Labor Relations Board, complaining about the board's "prejudiced" handling of the city's dispute with its police union.

He was referring to the board's ruling last week which said the city had the right to reject a contract offer by the Victoria police board which would have given city policemen wage parity with their Saanich counterparts.

The board had said that city council acted too hastily in repudiating the agreement, mainly on the basis of the mayor's opposiiton, and suggested it reconsider its rejection.

It said the Saanich agreement, might seem a harsh one to accept as the basis for the Victoria police union's demands, but the body to blame for that was Saanich and not the union.

Failure to recognize "these facts of life" could damage the morale of the Victoria force, the ruling warned.

In his letter to Weiler, Pollen says such "gratuitous and entirely subjective opinions" expressed by the board have prejudiced the city's relations with its police union.

He claims the board went far beyond its role of merely interpreting the provincial Labor Code, and "showed an overwhelming partiality together with a complete disregard for the economic and social ramifications of your entirely prejudiced opinions."

Pollen says as an elected representative he is becoming increasingly concerned "that overwhelmingly prejudiced boards such as yours, making one-dimensional assessments of situations, with no responsibility or accountability whatsoever, should so substantially influence the governance of our community and contribute to the destruction of the basic integrity of our governmental process."

Pound Slips

There was uproar at the crowded meeting when Mikardo, a veteran member of Parliament, accused trade union leaders of agreeing too easily to restraints on pay increases and said they should have wrung greater concessions for their members.

This aroused an angry reaction from Jack Jones, general secretary of Britain's biggest union — the Transport and General Workers — who had played a prime role in the consultations with ministers. He leapt onto the platform and berated Mikardo for his remarks amid deafening shouts from the audience.

Mikardo's speech was also attacked by Chancellor of the Exchequer Denis Healey at a meeting in nearby Bolton. He called it "sour and malignant abuse" and suggested it was disloyal to the party.

Thanks, But No Thanks!

The Empress Hotel's offer of cut-rate student accommodation seems to have fallen on deaf ears.

Empress sales director Larry Cooper said he received only two or three phone inquiries and only one student called in to look at a room, offered at $300 a month or $150 for two sharing a room.

Students, he said, decided the cost was still too high.

The offer was designed to help students caught in the accommodation squeeze at the start of the current semester and rates included the usual TV, telephone, maid and laundry services.

Wipe Out Israel: Amin

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — President Idi Amin of Uganda Wednesday called for the expulsion of Israel from the UN and "extinction of Israel as a state."

Amin, dressed in a field marshal's uniform encrusted with medals, said the actions should be taken against Israel "so that the territorial integrity of Palestine may be insured and upheld" and that Jerusalem would "revert to its holy status" for Christians, Moslems and Jews.

His speech before the General Assembly ran an hour and three-quarters but he did not deliver most of it. He stood at the lectern to open it briefly in Luganda, explaining: "As an African I am going to address you in an African language."

He then sat by while Ugandan UN Ambassador Khalid Younis Kinene read the bulk of the speech in English.

Amin finished the speech in broken English and received two standing ovations.

NO MISSILES

PARIS (UPI) — U.S. Defence secretary James Schlesinger Wednesday all but ruled out delivery of the nuclear-capable Pershing long-range missiles to Israel.

Secretary of State Henry Kissinger had virtually promised Israel the missiles, which can be fitted with nuclear warheads, six weeks ago in exchange for approval of the Sinai interim peace agreement with Egypt. But Washington has been backtracking ever since.

Schlesinger, winding up a week's tour of Europe, told a news conference the Pershings for Israel were discussed during his trip "in a very general manner, with no firm conclusions reached on the subject."

"There is a predilection in Europe that the introduction of this weapons system into the Middle East would not serve the purposes of stability," he said.

"The production line for the Pershing has closed and that any drawdown of American inventories might well affect our posture in Europe."

Anti-Spanish Protest Spreads Over Europe

Times News Services

European trade unions held a day of protest against the Spanish government today, calling for symbolic work stoppages and cuts in communication, trade and travel links with Madrid.

The action was the latest in a series of international protests against the execution of five Spanish guerrillas last Saturday.

The Spanish government, meanwhile, sealed its border to all commercial traffic to and from Portugal today in apparent retaliation for anti-Spanish rioting in Lisbon.

"We are still awaiting a final report from customs officials, but it appears that border crossing points have been closed to truck traffic. All they are allowing through are private cars," a Lisbon spokesman said.

All land traffic must pass through Spain to leave or enter Portugal.

Workers in France, Britain, Denmark and other European countries refused to service aircraft and trains destined for Spanish points.

The Spanish airline Iberia cancelled its two daily flights to Denmark and its four flights to Italy.

Two of the airline's planes which had landed in Brussels Wednesday were imobilized as ground workers there refused to refuel the jets.

Flights to London were halted for the second day.

In Madrid, hundreds of persons, many of them policemen in civilian clothes, disrupted the funeral of three slain policemen today trying to grab the flag-draped coffins and carry them on their shoulders through the streets.

With shouts of "vengeance!" and "assassins!" demonstrators surged forward toward police units parading past the caskets.

There were shouts of "let's take them on our shoulders," but the marching policemen broke formation to turn back the crowd.

DIG-IN WARNING

ate. The executive of this local is recommending to you not to try and weather the storm."

Neither the PPWC nor the Canadian Paperworkers Union have strike funds so the 13,000 pulp workers have been without pay since July 16. Meanwhile, what is believed to be a crucial meeting in the continuing talks between the forest industry and the International Woodworkers of America is to be held later today in Victoria.

The meeting of the Forest Industrial Relation executive, is apparently to decide whether to remove a three-year strike at the Huntting-Merritt shingle mill from contract discussions with the union.

It is believed that talks this week have centred around little else, with the industry attempting to include the dispute as a contract issue, and the union insisting that it be removed from contract talks.

IWA leader Jack Munro said the talks, which continued after pulp unions walked out of the mediation discussions, are in danger of collapsing unless the industry "gets realistic pretty quickly."

"They know we're not prepared to talk about Huntting-Merritt," Munro said. "They're really straining negotiations."

CUT HAND CAUSED WORKER'S DEATH

A Victoria man has died in Vancouver from infection in a cut hand, a spokesman from the coroner's office in Vancouver said today.

Theodor Laumann, 53, of 1678 Alderwood, a painter with Capital Builders, cut his hand about 17 days ago on a job at Capital Builders' condominium project in Port Hardy. He apparently didn't seek treatment until 10 days later when he was admitted to hospital in Port Hardy.

Corporal C. J. Stewart of Vancouver City Police, working out of the coroner's office, said Laumann was transferred to Vancouver General Hospital on Sept. 23, suffering from a badly infeced hand. Laumann received specialized infection treatment but died in hospital Monday.

Stewart said an autopsy was held Tuesday and cause of death has been determined as septicemia (infection), hemorrhagic pulmonary edema, early cirrhosis and cardiac myopathy.

He said an inquiry into the death will likely be held next week.

Laumann is survived by his wife Else, son Gary, 16, and daughter Debbie, 14.

The superb sunny weather of Wednesday set many warm temperature records for the first day of October. An outstanding example is Abbotsford where a high of 26 was reached, breaking the old record for the day of 23 set in 1945. Cooler conditions are in store for coastal areas today although the interior will experience another fine day.

The marine layer has become established on the outer coast with considerable low cloud and fog along the West Coast of Vancouver Island and along the Charlottes. An invasion of the moist air through the Strait of Juan de Fuca overnight will result in some morning cloudiness for the lower mainland. A weather system in the Pacific is becoming organized and will spread cloud and precipitation to coastal regions tonight. Showery weather will reach the interior on Friday.

Community News Roundup

What's happening in your community?

The Times on this page features news and views from community and ratepayer groups on southern Vancouver Island.

Send or bring in your notices and reports of meetings to the Victoria Times, 2621 Douglas, or telephone 382-3131 and ask for "community news."

The community news page appears every Thursday and is available to any community-related, non-profit public groups.

If Northridge residents want input in the community plan, they must step forward at the next meeting, says president Mary Szalai of the NORTHRIDGE Community Association.

Only one person has signified any interest so far and the job is just too big . . . more help is needed, says Szalai.

The meeting is Friday, Oct. 10, at the Netherlands Hall on Vanalman starting at 7:30.

On the agenda is the reclamation of Colquitz Creek and a petition to have Mann Avenue as a through street.

Also, the association is questioning various levels of government as to why one parcel of land on Vanalman was excluded from the Agricultural Land Reserve when all other parcels around it are included.

Dr. John Duffus of View Royal was elected chairman this week of the VIC WEST-ESQUIMALT-VIEW ROYAL Community Resources Board.

At the group's annual meeting Bob Tweedie, former chairman, was named vice-chairman; Sheila Bell, recording secretary; and Marion Bomford, treasurer.

Representatives from each of the areas are Vic West — Ruby Wilkinson, Fellowes Hewett and Tweedie; Esquimalt — Bomford, Marion Jones and Denise Bocick; View Royal — Joy Trail and Duffus; Songhees Indian Reserve — Clarence Dick.

Mrs. Elizabeth Bristowe, director, senior care advisory with the department of human resources, will speak on Help for Seniors, Friday at 10 a.m. at the JAMES BAY New Horizons Society senior forum, 511 Michigan.

Why is it so hard to undo something once a bylaw has been broken?

This is the question puzzling the ROYAL OAK Ratepayers Association in regard to a property on Vanalman Avenue which has 32 car hulks on it.

President Ruth Clay said some of the hulks have engines and some have only tires. They have complained to the municiplaity and the matter has been investigated "but the car hulks are still there."

The Saanich bylaw allows one unlicensed vehicle per property.

Also, the group had to phone Vancouver to get action on the dust problem caused by construction of the postal sorting station on Glanford.

Clay said that when excavation started the contractor had a water truck out the first day . . . then nothing.

"We phoned Vancouver and the next day the water truck was back on the job but not until a lot of dust damage had been done to our homes," said Mrs. Clay.

Royal Oak, along with Northridge Community Association will be sponsoring an all-candidate meeting Nov. 6. A location has not yet been decided.

A van is desperately needed in the BLANSHARD-DOWNTOWN area and residents will be getting together soon to raise funds for this project.

Community worker Lou Jordison said 15 children in the mornings need transportation to school and it's needed to take children to various projects, outings and also act as an emergency vehicle at night.

She said two weeks ago, while the group was using a rented van, a little girl suddenly became sick.

There were no cars available and she took the girl to emergency and she remained there for a while.

"This could happen again and points to the need for some kind of vehicle here," said Jordison.

The GORDON HEAD Ratepayers' Association executive is intensifying its efforts over the next four to six weeks to have input into the new community plan for their area.

It was decided at a meeting recently to draft a letter which will be sent to all residents inviting their opinion on what should be included in the plan.

The executive decided there will be an all-candidates meeting prior to the November election.

Committees dealing with general principles, specific goals and policies have been set up by the CADBORO BAY Ratepayers Association in coming to grips with the community plan for their area.

The committees will report back to the next executive meeting, Oct. 19.

Everyone worked hard and all had a good time. That's the word from Mary Dimock, secretary of the PROSPECT LAKE Community Association concerning their fall fair and carnival at the weekend.

The association realized $900 thanks to the great number of donations for the various stalls.

The anhual dinner meeting for the election of officers will be held Oct. 21 in the community hall.

Nurseryman Tony Wallner will illustrate his talk on winter and spring bulbs at a meeting Monday at 8 p.m. of the GORDON HEAD Garden Club.

There will be a collection of flowers Thursday, Oct. 9, and Friday to be placed in the Memorial Pavilion for Thanksgiving. Flowers should be at the home of Miss A. M. Williamson, 1815 San Juan, by 10 a.m. Friday.

There was no quorum so there were no elections at the annual meeting of the NEWTON-RICHMOND Community Associaiton.

Only four people showed up, reports Velma McIntosh and it is expected another meeting will be called in 14 days to decide what to do.

"We may have to knock on doors to get the required number and I think this may well spell the end of the association. There doesn't seem to be the interest to keep it alive."

Every Sunday, from 1:30 to 4:30, the METCHOSIN School Museam and Gardgn is open to the public. This is a unique museum and the garden is in full bloom at this time. It's a good place to stop when on a Sunday drive.

RE-ELECTED president of the Metchosin Ratepayers Association this week was John Waterman, above. With him on the executive are John Craffo, vice-president; Robin Quenet, treasurer, and Patricia Jones, Secretary.

No Interference —Metchosin Area

The message was clear: Leave us alone!

That was the general consensus at a highly spirited meeting this week of the Albert Head and Metchosin Ratepayers Association at the Metchosin Community Hall.

In the "hot seat" was the Capital Regional Board's planner Peter Hammer who fielded questions concerning the community plan and development in the largely rural area.

Several motions were passed including those asking that there be a freeze on planning until the provincial government has solved the traffic congestion at Colwood; that no sewage, treated or otherwise be dumped into the Strait of Juan de Fuca or in any fresh water stream; and that Metchosin be excluded from the western sector community plan.

Hammer repeated his statement the whole of the western sector which includes the Highlands, View Royal, Colwood, Metchosin, Langford and Sooke has suffered from non-planning. At the present time View Royal and Sooke are in the final stages of completing their plans while work has just begun for the others.

In answer to questions concerning traffic, Hammer said that with a proper plan, the politicians will be forced to implement a program.

"It's their accountability at stake and if they don't act then it's their problem."

On the proposed urban "bulge" into Metchosin, Hammer said it was only "good planning" to follow natural watersheds and to utilize areas suitable for housing.

He denied strongly his decisions were made to "accommodate" the provincial government's housing plans — through Dunhill Corporation — in the western sector.

He added that Saanich and the western sector were the only areas open to large developments and that this is where the development must take place.

Shirley Wilde, president of the Albert Head Ratepayers Association said former regional director Ken Rainey quit in total frustration with the planning department's position and of it breaking the board's own bylaws.

She demanded to know what personal financial responsibility to the residents do planners have for their decisions, how many planners are employed by the board and what is their pay scale.

Hammer retorted that he did not have to answer the questions and he didn't.

In regard to sewage disposal, the planner said "obviously" there has to be a community disposal system. Costs have to be worked out and said a study will be completed early in 1976 on this matter.

He suggested there may have to be a change in the electroral boundaries (Metchosin) so that costs would be paid only by those communities being served.

He said the only way Metchosin and Albert Head could ensure there would be no outfall or sewer line through their area is to do it through a community plan.

In answer to charges the planning department is not "independent" Hammer said "here I am. I am independent and willing to listen to your views."

This failed to sway opinion that Metchosin wants out of the community plan and, if that's refused, any community plan to go to referendum.

Blackmailing the Immigrants

In its zeal to find neat efficient solutions Ottawa's bureaucracy tends to ignore larger principles which have made this country a good place to live. Ongoing federal provincial discussions are considering the possibility of forcing newly arrived immigrants to settle in certain areas. Either they settle and remain for a prescribed period in worker-starved areas of the country or they are denied social services. To suggest such a course is really a smug form of blackmail. In fact, it is even worse. The proposal amounts to indentured servitude, the kind of thing that so many millions of Canadians came to this country to escape.

British Columbia and the federal government, not to mention the provincial College of Physicians and Surgeons, already see eye to eye on foisting a similar condition on immigrant doctors. If it's all right for foreign doctors, why not do it to all those immigrants?, seems to be the logic. Immigration Minister Robert Andras had the decency to say he found the whole idea "somewhat distasteful", although he qualified his remarks adding, that he might be willing to accept the scheme under certain conditions.

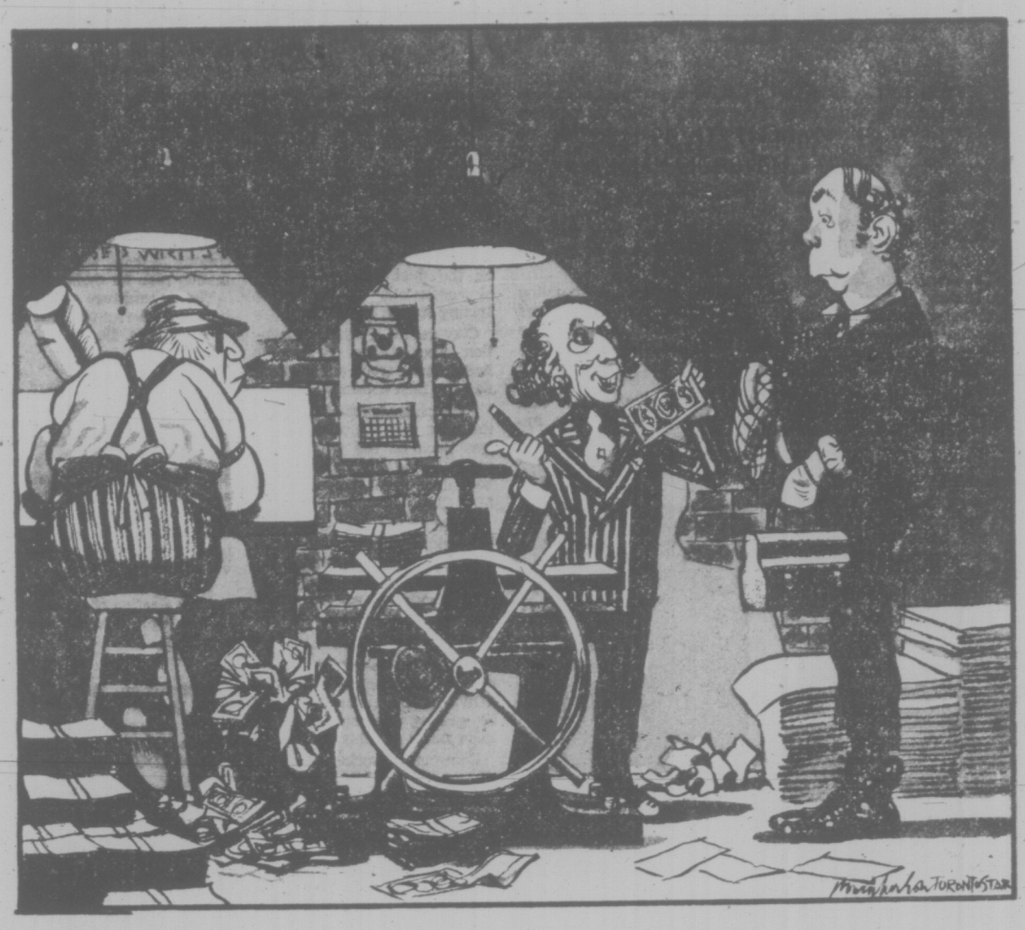
In Victoria Tuesday the immigration minister airily noted that some countries issue identity cards and require citizens to obtain permits before they can move. If such a policy were introduced in Canada it would apply only to immigrants, and not to Canadian citizens he said.

Is this a minister of the crown speaking in a democratic country? We can't believe our ears. If immigrants are required to carry identification cards or work permits, how long will it be before the same is required of all Canadians? Any such Nazi scheme, whether it applies to immigrants or anybody else should be quickly quashed and its authors dismissed.

The logic behind this odious idea is, of course, to smooth out regional economic wrinkles and prevent overcrowding in urban areas where housing or other necessities are in short supply. Both arguments are specious. If a large number of newly arrived immigrants are plopped down in some unsophisticated nether region, racial or religious tensions are sure to follow, as shown by past experience. As to the argument that such social contracts would ease overcrowding in urban areas, what is to prevent the immigrants from moving to the cities in a great wave once they have completed their sentences? Other Canadians do, and the immigrants, human nature being what it is, would soon follow.

If Canadians are so mentally and morally bankrupt as to be considering this solution it would be better if we just closed off the borders entirely. Surely we haven't reached that impasse. The senior immigration officials who thought up this one should put their thinking caps on and climb out of the bell jar.

As for Andras, if he has no better ideas than forcing identity cards on immigrants, he should consider immigrating himself to a political climate where he would be more comfortable.



Shake It and Bake It

Now that Allan Williams has become a lexicographer as well as a Social Crediter in just one day, he should be in a position to rethink the English language by the time the November session rolls around. He made a good start Tuesday when he joined Dr. Pat McGeer and Garde Gardom in embracing Social Credit principles. The silver-haired MLA told the startled throngs crowding the Vancouver press conference that he didn't believe opportunism is derogatory. After all, it was individual initiative and opportunity that made this province great, Williams added.

Why of course. How come us dumb clucks didn't think of that fine rationalization before? It was just like the time McGeer said there were no differences between Liberal and Social Credit principles. That didn't make sense either. It still doesn't. But let us stop and consider a moment. These boys have been out in the sun for a long time. The long march down the yellow brick road started last May. Oh, there's been a stop here, a chat there, but at the centre of the maze Bill Bennett was patiently waiting. Bill could afford to wait. There was no other way out of the maze. Now everybody's home. Conservatives, Liberals, old line Socreds, latent Socreds, all kinds of ingredients. This isn't a party, it's a cake mix.

JAMES RESTON

Trite, Shallow—Ford on Stump

NEW YORK — President Gerald Ford and the press are giving each other a lot of free advice these days, not for the first time. The press is advising the skipper to be a little more careful, lest he gain a few votes but lose his life, and the president is advising the press to be a little less sensational lest it make heroes of assassins and encourage the violence it deplores.

The odds are that both will agree in principle but go on as before — the president will keep working the crowds, with or without his safety vest, and the press will keep playing up the unusual, both on the assumption that this is what pays off with the public.

Ford is obviously not going to listen to the warnings that scrimmaging with crowds may be injurious to his health, but he might listen to the argument that it's bad for the Republican party.

The evidence is fairly clear that it is. He wows the Republican regulars and raises a lot of money for the GOP, but the more he travels and talks, the more he seems to decline in the polls.

Lousy President?

This tends to prove O'Neill's Law. Thomas O'Neill, the Democratic leader in the House of Representatives and Ford's old adversary, friend and present golfing companion, has always said: "Gerry's a lovely guy but maybe a lousy president. You have to see a lot of him to know how little there is to see."

The reasons for Ford's decline in the polls are fairly clear. He has very little to say on these trips around the country about the present and coming predicaments of the U.S., and he says it rather badly.

He is a dead-honest conservative confronted with radical problems — high rates of inflation, unemployment, frustration and even anger — and he gives the country locker room pep talks on the glories of fiscal responsibility.

Nixon failed because he didn't have any principles, and ironically, Ford may very well fail because he has. For he honestly believes that he can bring the country back to its senses by vetoing the Democratic party spendthrifts. New York is drowning and he gives it a lecture and throws it an anchor. "Waste not, want not," he says. "Help not, vote not," reply the big-city voters.

He is such a modest guy with such long association and sympathy for the sort of conservatives who dominate Republican nominating conventions that he actually takes the Ronald Reagan threat seriously.

His main political problem actually is not to worry about the nomination, but to win the election, and this he cannot do with the Hooverish speeches he has been making in Dallas and the west. He is running a little south of centre, and assuming that the country is in a conservative counterrevolution against the welfare state.

Maybe so, but unless the U.S. people have suddenly decided on a course of spiritual reformation and redemption, which is hard to notice here in Times Square, the Ford strategy of dramatizing his political limitations all over the country is not likely to be very successful.

As long as he stayed in Washington struggling with inflation, unemployment and the energy crisis, he was "steady old Gerry," fighting the divided and leaderless Democrats to a scoreless tie. The capital had never before seen so many amiable vetos, and if nobody was very impressed with his performance, nobody was very mad at him either.

But now he is so obviously in the political race that he is diminishing his most precious asset — the feeling in the country that he was concentrating on a hard job and not on himself or his political ambitions.

Amiable But Obvious

Ever since he announced that he was a candidate he has had to be careful to disguise his political speeches so that the Democrats couldn't demand equal time. So he has been mixing up his presidential and political responsibilities, so that nobody quiet knows what is political and what is presidential, and who should pay for what.

This has not helped his good-guy, straight-guy, image, and has led him into literally scores of speeches, interviews, coffee klatches, offhand comments, and so forth.

You should try to get through the transcript of everything the president actually says on one of these three-day invasions of the country. Taken on the whole it is troubling and revealing — obvious, trite, amiably shallow, and all the more so because it is so utterly sincere.

So maybe these trips should be reconsidered on political grounds if not on security grounds. They may not be bad for his physical health, but they are proving to be bad for his political future.

W. A. WILSON

Message Needs Repeating

OTTAWA — Since Donald Macdonald was by far the best choice as finance minister in Prime Minister Trudeau's reconstructed cabinet the operation must be treated as a sort of success.

It should not be automatically put on any higher plane because merely restructuring of the cabinet in ways that do not cause positive alarm is no more than a holding operation. Everything now depends upon future performance and that means, most of all, the prime minister's own performance. He claimed at his press conference, announcing the new ministry, that the government knows that it must provide the country with leadership.

If that is really true, a blinding flash of light seems to have struck the government in the two weeks since the cabinet autumn safari up to Meach Lake in the Gatineau Hills where Trudeau seemed to be suggesting that no one really knew what was meant by those critical words "political leadership." But since the whole weakness of the government so far has been its abdication of leadership it remains to be seen whether a true conversion has occurred.

Behind the scenes there was one dramatic difference from anything that has happened before in the Trudeau period. This time the prime minister had to use all of the prestige of his office to keep a reluctant minister in politics, at least for long enough to give his appointment public credibility.

United in Condemnation

Trudeau has never done anything like that before. Even as recently as a fortnight ago he let the most broadly based minister after himself, John Turner, leave his government with no real attempt to hold him. But with Turner gone, it was obvious that a weak appointment to the finance ministry would be ruinous to the Trudeau regime.

Macdonald is anything but a weak appointment but even so the fact remains that veteran observers here can recall no other period when the country's newspapers have been so united in condemnation of a government. That includes the period when Diefenbaker's government was disintegrating. In those days, at least a few newspapers remained Conservative. None seem to have been supporting the government during the last fortnight.

The press does not always represent the public and its collective positions are not often lasting. Franklin D. Roosevelt won four American presidential elections with the bulk of the newspapers in the United States utterly opposed to him. But when a government runs into as much general criticism as this one has in the last couple of weeks the development is symptomatic of something. Wise politicians recognize that there are lessons to be learned from such things.

When the prime minister talked about economic problems at the press conference after the new ministers had been sworn in he made good sense.

The difficulty, however, is that Trudeau needs to say more or less the same things week after week until he is bored with the sound of the words. He does not have to convince the Ottawa Establishment of the positions he was arguing—it has been convinced of the general appropriateness of those positions for a long time now. He does, however, have to convince the relatively unsophisticated people who make up the mass of the population. It is not going to be easy—if the task is undertaken at all.

. . . should say it again, and again

Those people are deeply suspicious and with good reason—they have seen much of the value of money disappear at a frightening rate. Much of the drive behind some of the unreasonable wage demands of the day arises simply from fear.

People have seen prices soar and they remain afraid that, unless they do more than catch up now, they will suffer grievously in future. That fear is the most understandable thing in the world but action based on it is a prescription for disaster.

Trudeau was effective on the problem when he spoke about it on Friday. He can be one of the world's most persuasive people when he takes the trouble to try. His message is not even frightening because it does not imply any real sacrifice. Trudeau is deeply convinced, as many of the rest of us are, that real living standards cannot rise as fast in future as they have in the past.

That is not so alarming because during the last 15 years or so they have risen at a rate never previously matched. Given some social mobility within the community, today's living standards are not at all bad and it is not a great disaster if they improve at a somewhat more normal rate—normal taken in the sense of long-term human experience.

They cannot increase at the old rate, for the time being at least, for two solid reasons and Trudeau cited both of them the other day. In the first place, the cost of energy has quadrupled on a world basis although in our own case the situation is not that bad. Our own energy costs will eventually, though, reach world levels.

His First Duty

The other lasting change arises from the fact that agriculture was a depressed industry for all of 20 years. Starting early in the 1970s, food prices rose, in many cases dramatically. Farm incomes rose as well, and not many would dispute the desirability of that. But if the improvement in farm incomes is to be lasting in real terms it follows that food will in future take a larger slice of urban incomes than in the past.

Canadians cannot control world energy costs and should not attempt to cut real farm incomes which are no more than at a decent level. That being so, more of our incomes inevitably will go on energy and food and that should be honestly translated as meaning that a larger percentage of real urban incomes will have to be spent that way for the foreseeable future.

That situation does, however, leave most people reasonably well off and there are a good many income transferral schemes which help the unfortunate. We have not achieved a just society, but we do make some progress at curbing social injustice.

Political leaders do not, however, achieve their ends by saying these things once then deciding the job is done. They have to work at leadership day after day, week after week, all the time they hold office. That is their first duty.

Stop the Strikes

Strikes, strikes, strikes! is all we ever see or hear in our papers, TV or radio, I, for one, am sick and tired of our gutless, do nothing government, our anemic businessmen and apathetic citizens.

It boggles my mind how a small group of union men can tie up a whole city, make everyone suffer and nothing is done about it. The outrageous salary settlements, and still to come demands, are beyond all comprehension.

While all this is happening our bumbling premier is blustering his way around the province. How the man has the gall to go before the Young Presidents Organization in Vancouver and tell them about sharing and social justice. As soon as elected he shared the taxpayer's money with himself, his elected officials and all government employees. That is where the spiral for higher and higher wages started.

I think it is time for legislation to curb the power of all unions and get everyone back to work. That time is now. So let's bring Barrett home to do some work and stop mouthing like a broken record.

Each and every citizen who feels as I do, should sit down, now, and write a note to the premier and or labor minister. All you need to say is: "Barrett go home and stop the strikes." In addition to that, telephone the premier, and labor minister's office leaving the same message. Phone the government every day or five times a day if the lines are open. If those two lines are busy, call any government line that is not busy and leave the same message for the premier. If you don't live in Victoria call whatever provincial government office is located in your town.

Let us fill up the mail bags and tie up the government telephones. Five thousand calls a day, just may get the message through. Let us be the activists, Barrett said he would be if he was a Chicano or Black in the U.S. — A Very Irate Citizen.

Balanced Births

Starving populations breed indiscriminately.

Wartime youth, in the face of death, breed indiscriminately.

Ghetto populations breed children and crime indiscriminately.

Which is nature's way of assuring survival among the insecure, who are relegated to death, starvation and discrimination.

The way of resolving the spectres of population explosion is to achieve proper degrees of civilization that cause them to disappear naturally. — V. R. Cragg, 799 Byng Street.

60 YEARS AGO

From the Times of October 2, 1915

PARIS — An officer attached to the British staff who returned to Paris today said the Prince of Wales had a miraculous escape from death during the battle of Loos. The prince was speeding toward the front in an automobile when he ordered the driver to stop at the foot of a knoll which he climbed. From there he watched the progress of the fighting through binoculars. While he was standing on the hill, a shell landed on the car, destroying it and blowing the driver to pieces. Reproached with having run into danger, the prince replied: "Well I have plenty of brothers."

The Fact Remains He Broke the Law

By LOUIS-G. ROBICHAUD

(Robichaud is assistant chief Crown prosecutor in Montreal. He wrote this article for the Montreal Star.)

I have followed with much interest the public debate generated by the guilty verdict pronounced by the higher courts in the first Morgentaler trial, following the acquittal pronounced by the jury.

Being the Crown prosecutor who pleaded this case from the beginning to the final judgment of the Supreme Court of Canada, let me state first that I have kept — and still keep — a neutral position on the issue of abortion. Nevertheless, since I was the one who argued successfully before the Court of Appeal of the Province of Quebec that a guilty verdict should be substituted to the jury acquittal, would you allow me to expose the other side of the story, and the reasons why I personally believe that the higher courts did the right thing in substituting the verdict?

It seems obvious to me from reading the unfavorable comments of some scholars, lawyers and editorial writers, that most have not followed in court or otherwise the proceedings of the first trial. It seems also obvious that most of them are pro-abortionists (which is their perfect right). I have often had the personal impression that these people were more interested in blurring the Morgentaler-abortion issue by expounding their dissent to the verdict substitution, than to face the real issue which was at stake during the Morgentaler trial, which sums up to this: Did Morgentaler break the law of this country or did he not?

I believe that it is a naive over-simplification of the matter to state that because the jury acquitted Morgentaler, it was decided thereby that the law was "unjust, hard or impossible to enforce . . ."

Had these persons followed the case thoroughly, they would have found out that the main ground of appeal by the Crown at the jury trial was an error in law committed by the judge who presided. They would have learned that the judge admitted as a means of defence, Section 45 of the Criminal Code, which says in substance that "anyone is protected from criminal liability, who performs a surgical operation for the benefit of the patient provided it is done with reasonable care . . . etc."

As a proposition of law, the higher courts have stated that this article does not provide a defence in a case of abortion, thereby stating the law of the land, thus maintaining the view taken by myself as Crown attorney. I have stated before that the acceptance of a defence based on Section 45, would be tantamount to abortion on demand. Although it is impossible to know what motivated the decision of the jury, one can still make certain deductions from the questions that they put to the judge, when they came back two or three times for further directions; these questions were solely related to Section 45.

As you see, it is very easy for some people to make a quick conclusion that because the jury acquitted, they had decided that abortion is a matter that should be left between the woman and her doctor, that the "law concerning abortion is unjust, etc. . . ."

To sum up, my point is this: Although it is true that Morgentaler was acquitted by a jury, one has to remember that the court is composed of a judge and a jury. And the high courts have said, among other things; that the jury who acquitted had been erroneously directed or misdirected.

Let me give you an example, which will seem extreme, but illustrates my reasoning: Let us assume that in a case of rape conducted before a jury, the judge gave as a direction in law to the jury, that it would be all right to accept a defence of "sexual necessity."

Let us assume that in this imaginary or hypothetical case, the evidence has established beyond a reasonable doubt that the rape was committed by the accused person who came up with the defence that if he did rape the victim, it was because he was deprived of sex for such a long time, that his act was dictated by an urgent necessity. Of course, this proposition would be erroneous in law, and if such a case were placed before a higher court, would you not feel that it would be reasonable that said higher court would set aside the acquital and pronounce a guilty verdict instead?

The public has to remember that what the higher courts have done in the Morgentaler case, that is substituting a guilty verdict to the acquittal, is a very exceptional decision. But you also have to remember that the evidence and the whole trial were also very exceptional, in the sense that everyone agreed that the offence had been established by the Crown and this evidence was furthermore corrobrated by the admission of the accused that he did perform the abortion reproached on the indictment. Is it not possible to conclude that the higher courts have merely recognized and acknowledged the admission of the accused as being the equivalent, barring any defence in law and in fact, to a guilty plea?

It seems to me that many people, however well-intentioned they may be, have made a mistake in concluding that because the Court of Appeal substituted a guilty verdict in this exceptional case, there would be a danger that the higher courts would be tempted to have recourse to this procedure more often. There is nothing rational that should lead them to believe that. All to the contrary, as is shown by Justice L. P. Pigeon, writing for the majority, in the Supreme Court of Canada:

"Needless to say that this is obviously a power (to substitute a guilty verdict) to be used with great circumspection. However, it is hard to conceive of a case in which it could be used, if not here. There cannot be any doubt concerning the commission of the offence by the accused . . ."

Finally, it is my opinion that with the proposed Lang amendment, there will be a marked difference between the chances of an accused choosing a jury trial and one choosing a trial by judge alone. Everybody will be tempted to choose a jury trial, knowing that if acquitted, on whatever legal error, he could never be found guilty by the higher courts, however crushing the evidence may be against him.

Census Figures Back Quebec Language Fear

By DOUGLAS FISHER

OTTAWA — There are several cautions one should keep in mind when using population statistics — i.e., the voluminous products of the census division of Statistics Canada.

Firstly, the structural image revealed is of Canada in 1971. It is four years old. Secondly, it is dangerous to read trends into the 1971 data without tracing back to the 1960 and earlier census years.

Having given cautions it is fair to say that recent publications in the 1971 series which relate to language retention, immigrant families and intermarriage would reinforce the concern of any thoughtful French-Canadian about the demographic future of his ethnic group and the French-Canadian community in Canada, particularly in Quebec, and even more particularly in Montreal.

It is fashionable enough to read the Bourassa government's Law 22 as a determined reaction to two noticeable population factors which have merged in recent years. The first factor is that Quebec now has the lowest birth-rate in Canada. That is, in hundreds of thousands of bedrooms in Quebec, decisions have been taken which mean that Quebec is generating smaller families than elsewhere in Canada. This remarkable drop in what was the province with the most prolific birth-rate only a dozen years ago has been accomplished, so far as we can tell from both statistics and facilities, without much use of abortion, so much more popular in Ontario and British Columbia.

The second factor has been there for many generations. Canada has always done badly in modern times in recruiting immigrants abroad who speak French. Further, an inordinately small percentage of immigrants chose to live in Quebec (and the Maritimes) compared with the high percentage which chose Ontario and the West.

The 1971 census data reinforces both these scary indications for the long-range future of the French-Canadian community in Canada. With some exactness the data suggests why the Bourassa government has focussed on methods to make the non-Anglo in Quebec have their children educated in French.

Most of the immigrants to Quebec have settled in Montreal. In 1971 there were almost exactly 140,000 immigrant families in the city. The average number of children per family was 2.1. The average family size for Quebec as a whole is 1.9 children per family. Take the margin in size in favor of the immigrant families out of the total figure and the disparity in family size between the French-Canadian and the immigrants is even more notable. Add the factor of the lower French-Canadian birth-rate in Quebec and it means even smaller families, fewer children and fewer heirs and protagonists for the French language and the culture in the years ahead.

The 1971 data on "husband-wife families by ethnic group of husbands, showing ethnic group of wife" for Quebec illustrates that French-Canadians are not only losing the battle of the cradle, they're not winning any gains at the marriage altar. There is relatively less intermarriage by either men or women of French-Canadian stock with spouses of the other ethnic groups than there is intermarriage within themselves by members of these other ethnic groups in Quebec.

For example, there were 930,000 marriages classed as having French husbands. Only 47,000 marriages were pairings of a French-Canadian wife with a man of another ethnic stock, and most of this number had married those of British stock. Neither men or women of Italian, Greek, Polish, Ukrainian, German and Jewish stock intermarry very much with French-Canadians.

Over in the area of language retention and transfer, the data is also bleak for French-Canadians. Of the 1,766,000 Montrealers who used French most often at home, over 640,000 could use another language. For most of these English was the overwhelming alternative. On the other hand a smaller fraction of those who normally spoke English at home could also use French. Even more seriously, among all the immigrant families only those of Italian, Spanish and Portuguese stock used French more than English as a second language, and even with them the margin in favor of French was small.

While some 38 per cent of the 2.7 million Montrealers in 1971 were bilingual in French and English, including 320,000 people who were of other than French stock, it is clear that nothing like the proportion of people of non-French stock could use French if that language really were the dominant and essential one for either work or participation in the culture of the province.

The publication that has this data on language transfer and retention opens with a very stark graph with three columns. It depicts the story for the whole of Canada in 1971. The column of those whose mother tongue is English shows that just over one per cent of the total speaks French and uses it at home; indeed, fewer speak French than other languages. The French column shows that just under 10 per cent of those who speak French as mother tongue use English as their language at home. But the shattering column is the one on those for whom neither French nor English is the mother tongue. Approximately 46 per cent of them speak English as the language at home and only about two per cent use French as the language at home.

It is silly to exaggerate the message of the material in the 1971 census as it bears on the longest continuing problem in Canada — French and English relations. Hoyever, it surely makes more understandable the steps the Quebec government feels it must take to ensure the long-term survival of the French language community in Quebec.

Frankly, the long-term survival of the language and of French-language communities outside Quebec looks very bleak.

Another New Television Season, Yawn

By William V. Shannon
New York Times

Another television season has begun. But like the annual changes in automobiles or the circus, only the details are new. There are three television networks as there are three major producers of automobiles or three rings at a circus. Each network competes fiercely against the other two, but the competition is only in trivia at the margins — a different face, a different format — since all three have long since settled upon the least common denominator of popular taste and the most secure routes to pleasing it.

The automobile, for all its significance in our lives, is only a mechanical contrivance and the circus a once-a-year pleasure, but television pervasively affects our minds. As our most powerful medium of entertainment and of news, it has changed our politics, our view of ourselves as a people, and even the way our minds work. If we are a less happy, less confident, less intelligent people than we were 30 years ago, a generation of television watching is largely responsible.

Television stresses violence. According to a survey by the University of Pennsylvania's Annenberg School of Communications, nearly three-quarters of the programs aired in the 1973-74 season contained violence. Another study estimated that by age 14, the ordinary child has been exposed to 11,000 murders on television.

The effect of televised violence in producing juvenile delinquency is secondary and indirect. That is, the viewer is emotionally disturbed and prone to violence for specific, personal reasons. The effect of television is to release his inhibitions, provide a how-to-do-it model, and create fashions in certain kinds of crime. But even these marginal adverse influences are serious inasmuch as every index of childhood unhappiness is rising — the rate of suicide, of violent crime, of runaways.

A less-talked about but profoundly disquieting development is the decline in intellectual achievement among today's youth. For four years, scholastic aptitude tests have registered a small but steady drop in the knowledge mastered by college freshmen. Reading scores among elementary school children are lower than they were a decade ago.

It could hardly be otherwise when the majority of children watch television three to four hours a day throughout their growing years, and one-quarter of all children watch television more than five hours a day every day. Television is primarily a medium of entertainment. Moreover, it is entertainment that provides instant gratification and requires no effort, no act of imagination. Physiologists report that the brain waves of a person watching television are similar to those of a person asleep.

Children become accustomed to paying attention in half-hour segments or, even worse, in the six-minute intervals between commercials. The combined effect of passivity, of a shortened attention span, and of so much time devoted to entertainment is naturally to subvert education and malnourish the mind.

One of network television's proudest accomplishments is also deeply flawed. That is its coverage of news. The problem is not the fake issue of ideological bias raised for self-interested political reasons by the Nixon administration. It is the much more fundamental problem, as television newsmen themselves recognize, of the nature of the medium. Television is pictorial and puts a premium on vivid action.

As the British critic T. R. Fyvel has observed: "Professional television pressures work constantly toward portraying action and not thought, personalities and not issues, what is visually happening and not the boring explanations why . . . and on the shock of violence, whether salutary or not, because this hits viewers hardest."

The effect of the evening news shows is unintentionally to magnify and distort existing social strains. The intense, apocalyptic view of reality disseminates anxiety and uneasiness throughout society.

Economic pressure to get high ratings adversely affects how local and network television news shows are presented. High ratings mean more advertising income. When the networks extended their national news shows from 15 minutes to 30 minutes in 1963 — time that was taken away from the local stations — they gained five additional minutes for network commercials.

Television can never be substantially reformed as long as it remains solely in the hands of businessmen preoccupied with packaging the largest possible audience for sale to hard-sell advertisers. The U.S. made a fundamental error when it allowed this enormously powerful medium to become a high-profit, fast-growth industry. Since government is not to be trusted with a communications monopoly, television channels ought to be controlled by churches, universities, foundations, and non-profit associations of writers, directors, and actors.

The coming of cable television with its multitude of channels could provide society with an escape route from today's claustrophobic network circus. But will this new technology receive the benefit of more imaginative and foresighted public policy than did radio or television?

RUSSELL BAKER

Gorilla comes into a saloon, walks up to the bar and says, "Give me a dry martini." Bartender mixes it, gives it to him, winks at the other customer, says: "That'll be 10 bucks."

Gorilla plunks down a sawbuck, bartender rings it up, looks at the gorilla and says, "We don't get many gorillas in here." Gorilla says, "So I see. Think the Red Sox can win the pennant?"

Bartender gets huffy. "That ain't your line," he says. "When I say we don't get many gorillas in here, you're supposed to say, 'At these prices, I'm not surprised.' "

So the gorilla reaches over the bar, picks up the bartender by the Adam's Apple, says, "I can tell you don't get no gorillas in here, else you'd know better than stand around telling gorilla jokes. If I put you down without breaking anything, what are you going to do to show you're a civilized gentleman?"

Bartender says, "I'll give you another martini on the house," which he does. To show he's a regular guy, he says to the gorilla, "Ask me who was that lady you seen me with last night." So the gorilla says, "Who was that woman I seen you with last night?"

"Look," says the bartender, "you got to say 'Who was that lady?' not 'Who was that woman?' "

Gorilla says, "I never say 'lady.' It's a sexist term invented to oppress women."

"I'm trying to make you laugh," says the bartender. "If you say, 'Who was that lady I seen you with last night?' I can say, 'That was no lady; that was my wife.' "

Gorilla jumps over the bar, grabs the bartender and shakes out 10 teeth. "You think I'm some kind of male chauvinist pig, telling me sexist jokes like that?" he says.

To calm him down, the bartender gives him two more martinis on the house and after a while the gorilla gets mellow and starts singing "Danny Boy" and "Mother Machree." During a lull in the concert, the bartender says, "You hear abut President Ford?"

"No," says the gorilla. "He can't walk and chew gum at the same time," says the bartender. The gorilla grabs the bartender by the ankles, swings him around his head a few times and lets him fly, breaking a 20-foot mirror and eight dozen glasses.

"There's nothing funny in jokes about the president," he says. The bartender figures the gorilla is a Republican, so to get on his good side, he says, "Have you heard about the watertight Volkswagen that won't sink?"

"No," says the gorilla.

"If Ted Kennedy bought one," says the bartender, "he'd be president today."

This makes the gorilla so mad he picks the bartender out of the glassware and says, "There's nothing funny in jokes about the men who run our country. Start saying your prayers."

Bartender says he didn't mean no harm, he was just trying to make people laugh, he is a good guy and to prove it he will give the gorilla a double martini on the house.

"Make it two," says the gorilla, and before long he is slumped over the bar mumbling he can lick any 30 men in the house. The bartender figures he needs cheering up, so he says, "Look at this," and holds up his right fist with just the pinkie and index finger sticking straight up in the air, and says, "Know what this is?"

"Tell me," says the gorilla. "It's a Polish sawmill worker ordering five vodkas," the bartender replies.

Gorilla lets out a thunderous roar, stands up, pounds his chest and says, "Anybody crude enough to tell an ethnic joke in my presence had better start running."

Real quick, the bartender gives him another martini on the house, and the gorilla subsides. After a while he says, "This place is depressing. I come in here, plunk down 10 bucks and don't even get a smile for my money. You know what I got a good mind to do?"

"Look," says the bartender: "Don't do anything rash: I'll give you back your 10 bucks." Gorilla pockets the sawbuck, starts out and bumps into a giraffe coming in the door. "Hey," says the giraffe, "they don't get many gorillas in here."

"At these prices," says the gorilla, "I don't know why not."

Man Denies Assault Charge

Martin John Kellington told a B.C. Supreme Court jury Wednesday it is "absolutely not true" that he forced a 17-year-old girl into his car at gunpoint and indecently assaulted her.

It was his final answer in cross-examination by crown counsel Brian Smith in the third day of his trial at the fall assizes.

Kellington, formerly of Victoria but now living in Kam-loops, is accused of attempting to forcibly seize one girl, taking another girl against her will with intent to have illicit sexual intercourse and indecently assaulting the second girl.

The girl in the second two charges has testified that Kellington forced her at gunpoint into his car on Tillicum Road and later made her have oral intercourse with him.

Evidence was concluded Wednesday and Smith and defence counsel Mike Hutchison were to give their summations today followed by Mr. Justice Craig Munroe's charge to the jury.

Kellington put forward a defence of alibi and mistaken indentity.

He told the jury that on the evening of March 20 he was called for picket duty during a strike but when he reached the union hall he found this was not necessary.

He spent the next three hours at two pubs and a coffee shop and arrived home at 741 Violet at 10:25 p.m. and went to bed.

Kellington said he was wearing brown high laced boots and not unlaced black shoes as indicated by the crown.

He admitted he was expecting to be questioned by police because of the similarity in description between himself and the suspect the police sought.

Asked what he meant by a comment to police when they arrested him April 1 that "my wife knows all about this," he said he didn't want police to return to the house because it would upset his wife.

He denied ever having a firearm, drawing a gun on any woman, stopping on Tillicum Road, stopping two girls who were jogging, forcing one of them into his car and attempting to have illicit sexual intercourse.

Under cross-examination, he said it was his mother-in-law who, on a visit March 21, told him of a radio news report that a man with a moustache with a red Tovota had picked up a girl on Tillicum Road.

Asked why he didn't contact police if he felt he would be questioned, he replied "I didn't think of it."

His wife, Doris, told court he arrived home at 10:30 and denied it was around 11 p.m. as police claimed she said at the time. She expected him to be questioned because she had seen a police sketch of a suspect in the newspaper.

Mrs. Erma Schmidt, Kellington's mother-in-law, said she left the Edelweiss Club in James Bay after a choir practice at 10:10 p.m. March 20 and saw her son-in-law's car in the driveway of his home shortly before she got home two blocks away at 10:30 p.m.

She said she made the comment to Kellington about the radio news report the following day in joking fashion because it mentioned a man with a moustache and red Toyota.

William Clayton, Kellington's uncle, said his wife and the accused were drinking until 7:20 p.m. at one pub.

Both he and Mrs. Schmidt said Kellington didn't look like the police sketch.

Wendy Chapman, a family friend and Mrs. Kellington's supervisor at work, also said the police sketch wasn't like the accused.

But when shown a police mug shot of Kellington taken April 2 she agreed the hair, style and length were similar and that the photo truly depicted how he looked April 1 and 2.

Asked if that was how he looked around March 20, she said "I have never seen him look this scraggly. He looks more tired than usual."

Speedy Sailor Snaps Own Mark

WEYMOUTH, England (AFP) — Englishman Tim Colman steered his Malay two-hulled Proa, "Crossbow" to another world speed yachting record Wednesday when he got his craft up to 31.9 knots.

Colman became the first yachtsman to break the 30-knot barrier at the annual trials off here Tuesday when he reached a speed of 31.09 knots.

'DEATH WITH DIGNITY' COMES AT LAST

LOMA LINDA, Calif. (UPI) — Chuck McCracken, who took himself off the kidney machine that kept him alive, waited almost three months to "die in dignity." But in the end death came unexpectedly.

McCracken, of San Bernardino, Calif., died Wednesday night at Loma Linda community hospital, 11 weeks and four days after he took himself off the artificial kidney machine. He was 37.

McCRACKEN

Blind and partially paralyzed from a kidney ailment and diabetes, McCracken said the dialysis treatments he needed were "sheer agony" and he wished "to die in dignity."

He had been ill for 24 years and even if he continued the treatments, doctors had warned him he would probably die in about a year.

"I don't believe a person should commit suicide," he said, but he believed God gave him the right to choose death in his own time over life dragged out by a machine.

"To be kept alive by doctors is not quite humane."

He was in and out of the hospital as his health slowly failed. He was readmitted Tuesday "so his family would not have to live with memories of his death in their home," a friend said.

All along he had expected to die of uremic poisoning, a lingering death preceded by slipping into a deepening coma. He expected to feel the approach of death — "twitching of nerves, drowsiness, nausea, a comatose state and then sleep," he once predicted.

While sitting in his hospital room Wednesday night, talking with his wife Barbara and two brothers, McCracken died of a heart seizure brought on by the strain of his condition.

He died within minutes, said his minister, the Rev. Bill Jolly.

McCracken's wife and four children, aged 9 to 14, shed no tears, the minister said. "They will miss him, but he had prepared his family so well, they appreciated that Chuck did what was right for him, and they are ready to go on with life.

"I saw no tears tonight."

New Job 'Demotion' O'Grady Testifies

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Insurance Corporation of British Columbia's former secretary and general counsel, Terence P. O'Grady, 54, told B.C. supreme court Wednesday he refused a new position in ICBC after his previous job was eliminated by a reorganization, because the new job, in his view, was a substantial demotion.

O'Grady is suing the public insurance corporation for alleged breach of contract of employment and for wrongful dismissal which he says resulted from a reorganization which took place in August, 1974.

O'Grady testified in the first day of the trial Tuesday that the position he was hired for was seen as the No. 2 job in ICBC.

He said that a year later when Norm Bortnick, ICBC vice-president and general manager told him that he was to be given the job of chief counsel in the autoplan division, he declined.

"It was a different position and junior in the hierarchy and junior to the one I had held," he testified under cross-examination by Walley Lightbody, lawyer for ICBC.

"In that (new) position I would have been one of 35 or 40 department heads, where previously I had been, I thought, No. 2 man," he testified before Mr. Justice Richard Anderson.

He said that as general counsel he was in charge of all the corporation's legal staff — estimated at 22 lawyers — but under the reorganization, the staff was to be divided into two groups: solicitors to handle non-contentious affairs and barristers to handle litigation.

O'Grady said he would be in charge of only the litigation arising out of autoplan claims.

O'Grady said in his statement of claim the change in duties for his $35,000 a year job were substantial, and that because of that, the original contract of employment could be treated as being repudiated by ICBC.

He is claiming damages for lost income following the departure from ICBC and for his difficulty in re-establishing himself in Victoria where he had been in private practice and was solicitor for the City of Victoria before joining ICBC in 1973.

The case was to continue today with Bortnick expected to testify.

POLICE STAND FIRM ON PROTEST

A decision by the Calgary police force to endorse commuting the death sentence of convicted killer Rene Vaillancourt, will not effect the Victoria Police Association's intention to stage a passive demonstration in support of the death penalty.

Sgt. Pat Braiden, president of the Victoria police union said today he is confident members will vote in favor of holding a four-hour study session if Vaillancourt, who murdered a Toronto policeman, doesn't hang on Oct. 31. The vote will be taken at a general membership meeting next Tuesday night.

Frank MacDonald, president of the Calgary police association said on Tuesday the association "will have no reluctance at all about clemency being extended" following the disclosure Vaillancourt suffers from a brain disease affecting his mental faculties.

"If we're going to make a stand across the country we had better pick a better case than this," Constable McDonald said.

He said members voted by a 3-to-1 margin earlier this week not to join a national work stoppage by the Canadian Police Association if Vaillancourt's death sentence is commuted by the federal cabinet.

Braiden said the decision to recommend staging a protest was taken at a meeting of executives of the B.C. Police Federation in June.

He said the decision was kept silent "because it was imperative no one say anything until the appeal system had been absolutely expended."

"It's not a personal thing," he said. "But we feel if we have capital punishment on the books then it should be carried out."

Braiden felt there was a disconcerting tendency to extend the "greatest amount of leniency to maximum type offences" and he and other police officers want to see it stopped.

Braiden assured the study session would be a "lawful, orderly thing."

Recreation Staff Hired

A 10-man permanent staff for Oak Bay recreation centre has been hired and Wednesday took a training seminar in readiness for opening of the $3 million building Oct. 24.

Recreation manager Duncan Russell said the apparent three-week delay from anticipated opening Oct. 3 could not really be considered a hold-up as the estimate was made some time ago and the timing is considered good for an 18-month contract.

"The contractors are practically right on date," Russell said.

There could be a few materials lacking to prevent full completion of the centre, but this would not interfere with the opening, Russell said. The curling rink, pool, arena and social facilities will all be available with the opening, he added.

The pool has been filled with water for testing the tank, filtration, chlorine monitoring and pumping equipment. Ice-making will begin about mid-October to allow 10 days for proper surfacing and line-painting.

Russell said the different facilities are mechanically interrelated: "You can't start one without using the other."

Meanwhile programs are being lined up and minor hockey workouts have started using icetime available at other Greater Victoria arenas.

Group Protests Insecticide Use

Foresters were urged today to drop a proposal to use chemical pesticides to control the mountain pine beetle which has wiped out thousands of pine trees on Vancouver Island.

Derrick Mallard, president of the Citizen Association to Save the Environment, said the proposed insecticides, ethylene dibromide and lindane, are 'extremely dangerous to other forms of life.

'They will not only kill the birds but useful forms of insects," he said. "In the long run the benefits would be nil."

Three leading authorities on the beetle, L. Safranyik, D. M. Shrimpton andd H. S. Whitney of the Burnside Pacific Forest Research Centre, are expected to back Mallard's claim at a workshop-seminar being held in the Newcombe Auditorium in the Provincial Museum today.

The three scientists in a report state insecticides are of limited value because each tree would have to be individually treated. This would be costly.

Moreover, they point out the insecticides would be a threat to other forms of life.

The beetle, smaller than a housefly, has been taking a heavy toll of trees in B.C.

Estimates of mature lodgepole pine killed by this beetle in B.C. amounted to 1.3 million cubic feet of timber per year in the last 20 years, about three per cent of the average annual cut, according to scientists.

In the past, the beetle was allowed to carry out his work — propogate by boring out a chamber in the tree where it laid its eggs. Trees died and were recycled by nature — a beneficial process. But due to past practices of allowing over-cutting, timber in the near future is expected to be in short supply in the interior and scientists now have to find a way of saving the trees.

Only mature or aging trees usually fall prey to the beetle.

The younger trees, like all living things, respond to attack. Its living cells produce a liquid resin which forms around the place where the beetle bored through the bark. New tissues grow over the wound, thus preventing the beetle from colonizing.

But like all living forms, as the trees go and are on the decline, they become less resistant to attack from beetles.

Some Thoughts On Sloth -- Can A Man Do Nothing?

When my wife and I were up at Qualicum for a brief, Indian Summer vacation, as I noted the other day, we lounged at the side of a heated swimming pool and I made some notes on sloth.

Webster's defines sloth, by the way, as "disinclination to action or labor" and, I have to admit, it's a subject that's interested me from about the age of six onward.

The notes are both illegible and incoherent, perhaps because, like any other work, writing — even note-making — is not meant to be done in pleasant or comfortable surroundings. Almost every great work has been created in a dank prison cell or a hotel room that overlooks an alley or some other rotten place, which is why authors who become great financial successes invariably find that the rewards and the artistic failure often arrive simultaneously.

It has not been without the penalty of guilt feelings, since I come from a generation that felt guilty about almost everything, but I have always thought that sloth was really what I most wanted in life. This may—or may not — have come as the result of starting work when I was 16 years of age and fairly galloping on the old treadmill in the years since. "The bitch-Goddess, Success," as someone once called it, became an obsession with those of us who survived The Great Depression (little dreaming that another, under a different name, would catch up with us) and hard work was presumed to be the shortest route. It dumbfounds me now, but at one time I ran a city desk and wrote six of these essays each and every week for no other reason except that it seemed the proper thing to do.

But always my secret ambition was to do absolutely nothing. Sloth was the real reward I was subconsciously hunting. Independence, the elusive goal, was synonymous with indolence. My dream of success was a very slow boat to China.

When these moments came, I invariably confused them with contentment. Once, some years ago, my wife and I flew to Mazatlan, before it became such a tourist trap. We walked along the shore, watching the dolphins and diving pelicans and picking up sea-shells and we lay in the fine sand, warmed by the Mexican sun, cooled by the Pacific breeze.

"I wish I knew why we were going home next week when this is all I ask of life," I said, or words to that effect, to my wife. It seemed the whole answer to me then, as it has on Bermudan and Cuban and other beaches in such rare moments.

On that trip we had met and become firm friends with a former Toronto advertising executive who, in middle age, under the influence of a Gauguin biography, had gone to the Mazatlan beaches as his escape from the rat-race. He was not exactly an admirable man, having financed his life in the sun by cashing in on his insurance policies and leaving his loved ones with a bare subsistence, but he seemed to have found the answer to living. He had a cheap supply of tequilla, a compliant Mexican girl and all those sea shells.

I thought it was the answer, at least, until several months later when we had a letter from him. He was back in Toronto, back in the advertising business, back with a good, stout wife and his mewling children. He dismissed the Mazatlan episode in one sentence. I've never forgotten. "It got just too boring," he wrote.

I was thinking of that again by the Qualicum pool after we'd driven over to Alberni. We were going to hit some balls at the driving range there, but the range was closed ("Ball-pickers all in school," the sign said). On the way back to Parksville we picked up a couple of hitch-hikers, hairy young men who had spent the summer, it turned out, in a driftwood lean-to on Long Beach. It seemed to me a wonderful thing to do and I said as much.

"Well, it wasn't all that great," one of the young men admitted. "The first couple of weeks were fine, got all of the cobwebs of city living out of our hair. But after that, well, I don't know. We fought a lot, which was the last thing either of us expected" — I could see him, in the rear view mirror, grinning at his friend and the friend grinning back — "but the truth is we never did find it easy to do nothing."

I can't read them, as I say, but I fancy this is the central theme of the notes I made. Whatever else you may say of sloth, it's not an easy condition for the human psyche. You may think that this "disinclination to action or labor" is a desirable attitude, perhaps even enjoy it as a brief interlude, but the perverse human spirit eventually will insist on some activity.

Given the chance, say, to lie forever on that Mazatlan shore I expect that in a day or two I'd be up on one elbow, then up on my feet, looking for some way to fill the vacuum of an existence that, for all the wrong reasons, might seem purposeless.

This is not a manifestation of the search for success or independence or even financial security. I have been with aging multi-millionaires who could lie bonelessly forever in the sun, yet can't manage a day of it without some inner, compulsive need to do something, anything. Indeed, it may just be the shortest path to boredom which, for most of us, is a living death.

It is, I agree, a dreary prospect. It means that some of my own most cherished fantasies — I have often thought of spending the rest of my life just listening to the waves on the shore or finding pictures in the clouds — might not stand the test of reality, that a lifetime of hateful work might just be my heritage when I no longer have to do it. That way lies, if not madness, at least the death of a dream and, with me, dreams die hard.

At EMI, a Program to De-Bug Families

DON VIPOND
Times Staff

Parents forget — forget what the world looked like when they were just three feet tall, forget what terrified them, what they liked and longed for, the kooky things they did and why.

Taken together and to the extreme, this can mean big trouble in a family.

If you had to put into a handful of words what that place on the sixth floor of the Erie Martin Institute is all about — you might say it's for kids who are driving their families and themselves 'round the bend.

On the sixth floor children in turmoil, from infancy to age 15, come to live for five weeks while a group of young men and women with a bountiful supply of sympathy and tolerance try to get inside their heads, see the world as they see it to define what's bugging them so.

Parents often there's just one) come along for weekly talks. They're bugged too of course, not only with their child but with all the other burdens which plague adults.

For the staff of 22, led by psychiatrist Phil Ney, the objective is to help find a different pattern for the family's life, a way for them to live together which everyone thinks is worth the effort.

The children's unit on the sixth floor, with room for 10 youngsters, has been operating almost three years now. The signs suggest it's a winner.

Before it opened, one in three children treated at EMI were re-admitted. But only six per cent of the 275 youngsters who have stayed on the sixth floor have come back for another stay.

A check of families seven months after shows 94 per cent are getting along as families.

While the program is strictly voluntary, some children are reluctant to start. Five weeks later, all are reluctant to leave. While staff is probing to find the source of troubles, it takes time to build their confidence because most of these children see themselves as failures.

While they're here they begin to realize the world can be a happy place," says Ney. "They have fun but they also realize they're being helped."

Ney points out that the unit isn't trying to replace parents. No one can do that. The children stay five weeks, no more, no less. That's proved to be an efficient amount of time.

When the stay is over, the staff writes out "specific prescriptions" for the family, the family's doctor and the child's teacher. ("If this happens, we suggest you do that . . .")

In the vast number of cases, parents who follow suggestions and stick to them find they work, says Ney.

The staff includes a psychologist, social worker, teachers, nurses, orderlies and occupational therapists. On the face of it, the unit is expensive.

"What we're saying to the public-at-large is we're saving you a lot of money," say Ney. "If we can keep kids out of institutions, it's a lot better for everyone in the long run."

No Charge In Fatal Olympic Blaze

No criminal action is contemplated in connection with the fatal fire June 21 at the Royal Olympic Hotel, regional prosecutor Wally Anderson said today.

Anderson said he did not feel there were sufficient grounds for prosecution but indicated the case would remain open in the event further evidence comes to light that might warrant a charge being laid.

A coroner's inquest concluded Aug. 23 that Walter Stanley of Resolute Bay, N.W.T., a guest in Room 210 of the hotel, started the fire through careless smoking. The six-man jury said Stanley failed to take responsible action when he first became aware of the fire in his room.

Elizabeth Mae Towers, 20, of Trail, Lorna Ann Minnis, 57, of Vancouver, and Charles McDonald, 90, a permanent hotel resident, were killed in the early morning blaze that gutted the interior of the seven-storey hotel.

Anderson said for the crown to prosecute it would have to prove there was a "wanton and reckless disregard for the lives and safety of others." Such evidence was lacking, he added.

The coroner's jury also cited inadequate fire safety standards at the hotel as a factor which contributed to the deaths of the three victims.

A spokesman for the B.C. Supreme Court in Victoria indicated today no civil action is pending against the hotel owners.

According to the Statute of Limitations an aggrieved party has one year to initiate an action.

Area Teachers, Trustees Open Salary Talks

By KIT COLLINS
Times Staff

First salary bargaining talks started today between lower Vancouver Island teachers and school trustees, one of only three zones in the province willing to give the provincial government's new negotiating system a try.

Teachers' spokesman Frank Mather said today that representatives are "under immense pressure" to compress all the work that needs to be done into the time frame provided under legislation passed earlier this year.

"But we're entering with optimism," he said.

Representatives could have used a much longer time period to work out a basic contract similar in intent to contracts last year in each of the five school districts included in the regional bargaining zone.

"We had to construct a new contract right from scratch for bargaining purposes."

The system of local bargaining between trustees and teachers in each district also allowed better speaking contact with teachers locals membership, he said.

Education Minister Eileen Dailly said Wednesday she hopes that the lower Vancouver Island group and the other two functioning under the zonal bargaining system — East Kootenay and the Okanagan — will set examples for other districts in future negotiations.

Although the minister said she is not surprised that the vast majority of B.C. school teachers opted out of the zonal system, B.C. trustees spokesman Mike Berg has accused teachers of purposely "fragmenting" the new system.

President of the B.C. School Trustees Association, Berg charged Wednesday that teachers are "totally irresponsible" in their demands and are trying to force negotiations into compulsory arbitration by opting out of the zonal system.

Of 75 school district teachers' associations in B.C., only 17 decided to bargain on a zonal basis while 69 school boards of the 75 districts had chosen the zonal bargaining.

Berg said teachers had opted out of the system in an attempt to use "divide and conquer strategy." He told the Times that because only three partial bargaining zones are left teachers are placed in a superior bargaining position.

"By whip-sawing one district against another they can force boards into compulsory arbitration," he said.

Teachers demands for 20 per cent increases are ridiculous, he added, particularly when some members are now earning up to $35,000 a year as administrators and $21,000 as classroom teachers.

But B.C. Teachers' Federation president Bill Broadley refuted Berg's charges.

The legislation, he said, clearly allows for teachers and school boards to opt for local bargaining of salaries.

For Berg to charge "that one group is sabotaging negotiations when it is simply following the law of the land, shows he just doesn't understand what the legislation is."

Referring to salary demands, Broadley said teachers will be seeking the going rate. "Recent measures of the going rate are in the 20 per cent area, But the BCTF doesn't set what teachers get, the local does that.

"Surely the public doesn't expect teachers to subsidize the system by accepting less," he said.

Under the legislation passed last spring, the province set up 13 zones encompassing 75 school districts for school board-teacher contract negotiation.

The five districts in the lower Vancouver Island zone are Greater Victoria, Saanich, Sooke, Gulf Islands, Cowichan. Only North Cowichan opted out.

Dailly said she didn't consider the legislation had collapsed because of the lack of province-wide support for zonal bargaining.

She said she hopes more teachers would accept the option, but "at no time did we expect that we would have the whole province in one year."

Dairies Face Paper Dearth

Victoria dairies are having to "scrounge around" to come up with paper containers for their milk products because of the shortage caused by the 11-week B.C. pulp strike, a dairy manager said today.

R. E. Cottingham, manager of Island Farms Dairy in Victoria said his operation is managing to get some supply "from other sources", but if that supply dries up they could be in trouble.

"We have a sufficient supply for a while, providing we can keep these other sources going. It's definitely not a normal situation. We wouldn't want to be in this situation all the time," he said.

Cottingham declined to reveal the dairy's alternate source of paper supply, but said "we scrounge around."

He said the existing supply of containers varied with the products — "For some products we have enough for several months, but for others, it's less than a month."

Spokesmen for other Victoria dairies said they have about one months supply of paper milk containers on hand and no immediate prospects for additional supplies once those are gone.

However, I. R. Fuller of Silverwood Dairies said his company has a large supply of alternative packages on hand. The company plans to begin selling milk Monday in a one-quart plastic pouch bag. The bag is disposed of once it is empty. The pouch was part of a new merchandising method planned by the company and was not brought in specifically with the strike in mind.

The company has a large stock of returnable plastic bottles as well.

A spokesman for Palm Dairies in Victoria said that company also had about four weeks supply of paper cartons on hand.

Catch-22 Claim By Air Canada

An attempt by Air Canada to claim $195 from City Hall, after its downtown office was left without heat during the recent civic strike-lockout, ran into a Catch-22 situation at Victoria's finance committee meeting today.

Like other business premises in Centennial Square, Air Canada's reservations office was deprived of its normal heating when pickets prevented oil deliveries to the central plant serving all buildings around the square.

The $195 claimed today represented rental costs for two electric heaters ($80), plus the amount by which the airline's electricity bill exceeded its normal hydro costs ($115).

Catch-22?

The city's lease agreement, as city solicitor Jakob de Villiers noted, contains "a covenant on the part of the city to heat, as well as a clause whereby the city is absolved from all responsibility for failure to honor its covenant to heat."

Therefore the committee recommended rejection of the claim.

In any case, said Ald. Bob Ellis, payment would have created an unfortunate precedent. "If we pay this one they'll come crawling out of the woodwork all over the place."

COCKE CONFIRMS PRIORY WANTED

Health Minister Dennis Cocke confirmed today the province is negotiating the purchase of St. Mary's Priory hospital at Langford.

The only question to be settled is the price, he said.

The 94-bed hospital, which is providing long-term care for elderly women, is owned by the Society of the Love of Jesus, a Roman Catholic religious community whose active members have dwindled to three.

The sale will also involve about eight acres of grounds on Goldstream. Long-term plans indicate the present buildings may be replaced with a new 150-bed hospital providing long-term care for elderly together with addition of housing for old people who need a lesser level of nursing assistance.

Provincial and regional hospital board will likely buy the hospital in partnership, with the provincial government paying 60 per cent.

Teargas Damages Favored

When city police captured fugitive Danny Cain by firing teargas through a window last July 15 they caused $446.60 damage to the property of John Munro at 1166 Summit.

Today city finance committee recommended Munro be given a compassionate grant covering the repairs because neither the householder's insurance nor the city's indemnity applies.

Comptroller-treasurer Mason Sheldrick said it was to his knowledgee the first claim of its kind against the city, and that it should not be considered a precedent.

Cain, an escaper from prison, was subject of two manhunts before police cornered him in the Summit duplex.

CUPE Pact Snags

Remember the CUPE dispute?

It halted garbage collection, road repairs and tax bills for three months earlier this year and it's not settled yet — at least not officially.

Eight months after the city's outside workers first went on strike triggering the shutdown, and five months after they agreed to return to work, there is still no formally signed contract between the city and the 280 outside workers.

One item in the contract is still to be worked out and the two sides have, in effect, agreed to disagree on it for awhile, says city manager Jim Bramley.

The issue is centred around trade rates worked out in the contract — not what the rates are, but who they apply to.

Bramley said all other parts of the agreement are finalized, the new rates are being paid to other outside workers and there are no dangers in having an unsigned contract.

"There is an understanding between the two parties that this is only one point we're not agreed on," he said.

Jim Walker, president of the outside workers local of the Canadian Union of Public Employees says the matter will be brought up by the union at a finance committee meeting of council Friday.

Walker says discussion on the issue was postponed while negotiators for both sides were on holidays and that with a little luck the contract can be signed before negotiations get under way next year for the next contract.

Firemen Battle As Chicks Cluck

A flock of chickens took to the trees and clucked frenetically as Saanich firemen battled to put out a fire in an unoccupied two room cottage at Interurban and Wilkinson early today.

A fire department spokesman said the fire, reported at 12:30 a.m., destroyed the building owned by Lorne McNutt and used as a storage shed. About 100 bails of hay stored inside went up in smoke. No damage figure has been determined but it is expected to be minimal.

Firemen believe the fire may have started by spontaneous combustion. They were at the scene for nearly three hours.

The spokesman said when the fire broke out free-ranging chickens in McNutt's yard flew up to the trees and passed a noisy commentary on the firemen at work.

McNutt is a well-known Saanich resident and for years held the contract to collect garbage in the municipality.

ASK THE TIMES

Q. Does anyone have the present address of Dr. Sedgewick R. Richardson, dentist, who practised at 715 Fort St. in 1940? D.B.

A. A source among local dentists advises that Dr. Richardson died about 11 years ago. His son, Dr. Allan Richardson, is a professor teaching dentistry at UBC. And the senior Dr. Richardson's nurse, Mrs. Elsie Rust, dental assistant for more than 40 years, still lives in Victoria.

Chamber Opposes Any Store Hour Restrictions

Victoria Chamber of Commerce Wednesday passed a resolution stating that store hours should be left to the free market place and not restricted by municipal bylaw.

A copy of the resolution will be sent to Vicoria city council, which is scheduled to give first readings next week to a trades licence bylaw amendment restricting the sale of a wide range of goods on Sundays and statutory holidays.

Chamber president Jack Hutchins said the resolution should be viewed as a positive stand by Victoria businessmen on the question of Sunday shopping.

Hutchins said the resolution was obviously triggered by the proposed Victoria City bylaw restricting the sale of some items on Sundays and holidays but was not meant to be critical, only positive.

The resolution supported a personal statement made earlier in the day by Hutchins that businesses should be left free to make the decision for themselves about whether to remain open on Sunday.

Alan Aldous, president of the Downtown Business Association, said the association's executive will be meeting next week to discuss another matter, and it's likely the Sunday closing question will be raised at the time.

Not being a merchant himself — he is manager of the Victoria branch of the Royal Trust Company — Aldous said it's difficult for him to express any personal comment until he's had a chance to hear the views of merchants.

"I can see the pluses, I can see the minuses; it's quite a complex problem," he added.

EARLY GRAIN PRICES

WINNIPEG (CP) — All grains except oats suffered sharp losses in moderate trading at the close today on the Winnipeg Commodity Exchange.

Some oilseed and rye futures were down their daily trading limits, while losses in feed grains were not quite so severe. Oats was mixed, but generally weak.

Wednesday's volume of trade was 1,709,000 bushels of barley, 1,326,000 of rapeseed, 845,000 of rye, 592,000 of oats, 5877,000 of feed wheat, 243,000 of flax and nil of Montreal corn

CHICAGO (AP) — Grain futures fell to limits Thursday on the Board of Trade in all of the major pits.

Not all commodoties showed a limit move in every contract, however. Wheat futures were down 20 cents, corn 10 and oats 6, all limits. Soybeans lost 19½ cents, ½ short of a limit. Oil futures declined 50 points and meal about $5 a ton.

Gold futures were up about $2 an ounce, reflecting a higher price for spot gold abroad. When London gold closed a shade lower, gold futures fell, losing about $1 an ounce.

The weakness in grain futures was noted on the opening. It appeared that prices moved almost steadily lower into the close. Trade was mixed but, as the declines widened, buyers backed off.

The selling was influenced by the weather, the expanding harvest and good to excellent yields of corn and soybeans, and prospects for clear weather for several more days.

There appeared to be very little support into the close for any of the major grains. At the final bell very few buyers came forward.

At the close, wheat futures were 17¾ to 20 cents a bushel lower Dec. 4.09½, soybeans 18 to 19½ lower Nov. 5.53½, corn 1½ to 10 lower Dec. 2.96½ and oats down 6 cents Dec. 1.56.

The real estate company said revenues increased 33 per cent to $48 million from $36.1 million.

Dominion Bridge

Dominion Bridge Co. Ltd. says its United States subsidiary Amca International Corp. has agreed to purchase two American industrial equipment manufacturing concerns, Cherry-Burrell Co. and Desa Industries Inc.

Trizec

Trizec Corp. Ltd. reports net earnings of $2,163,000 or 28.8 cents a share for the nine-month period ended July 31, compared with net earnings of $3,556,000 or 48.2 cents a share in the same period last year.

The company, engaged in real estate development and management, reported gross revenues of $124,194,000 in the 1975 period versus $101,730,000 in the comparable nine-month period in 1974.

James A. Soden, chairman and chief executive officer, said cash flow from operations increased to $13,050,000 or $1.74 a share compared with $12,233,000 or $1.66 a share in the 1974 nine-month period.

This increase was "despite lower than anticipated operating revenues from Trizec's investments in hotels, the consequence of a business downturn which affected the entire hotel industry in Canada," he said.

Trizec said it had acquired a 30-storey office building in the Peachtree Center, Atlanta, Ga. for $4 million cash and assumption of a $7,350,000 first mortgage through Tristar South Inc., a joint-venture in which Trizec holds a two-thirds interest.

Trizec also said it sold its half-interest in Calgary Place for $14.1 million to a West German group headed by Deutsche Bank AG.

It also sold two residential developments in Ottawa for $6,775,000.

A $2.5M Energy Saver . . .

OTTAWA (CP) — A $2.5-million campaign to convince Canadians to use less energy is underway.

The program includes a series of newspaper, television and radio ads aimed at school children, tips on how to conserve heat and even an animated Christmas cartoon to be shown on television.

Aim is to cut energy consumption growth by two per cent this year, according to Brian Kelly of the federal office of energy conservation.

Consumption of all forms of energy grew five per cent during the past year and the rate can be cut to three per cent if the public responds to the program, he said Wednesday.

The first of several full-page newspaper advertisements appeared in some daily newspapers last Thursday.

The long-term goal is a 20 per cent reduction in projected energy consumption by 1985 which, the campaign says is possible with modest redlctions in energy used in homes, industry and transportation.

The energy conservation office soon will publish a booklet of tips on how to operate furnaces more cheaply and Kelly said the National Film Board is producing an animated cartoon in December called The Energy Carol, a take-off on the Charles Dickens Christmas story.

The conservation office also is running a speakers' bureau and may have a van with a mobile display of conservation tips.

The government is spending about $700,000 on the newspaper advertising, and about $150,000 each on television and radio.

Last winter's advertising campaign for energy conservation cost about $700,000 in total.

The cost, about 11 cents per person, will pay off if consumers follow the conservation advice and better energy consumption habits potentially can save consumers about $20 a person annually, Kelly said.

MERCURY PROTEST

TORONTO (CP) — More than 50 persons demonstrated for about two hours in the rain Wednesday at Queen's Park, calling for action in the case of methyl-mercury poisoning in northwestern Ontario.

The demonstrators Wednesday included members of AIM and representatives of Indians at the Grassy Narrows and Whitedog Indian reserves near Dryden, Ont.

About 20 persons from the two reserves have methyl-mercury poisoning from eating contaminated fish.

More Inventive Exposure Urged for Visual Arts

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

VANCOUVER — The need for more perceptive and inventive use of existing facilities in making artists' work accessible to the public, was emphasized today by Andre Fortier, director of Canada Council.

He was speaking on careers and markets in the arts to the annual meeting of the International Council of Fine Arts Deans at a luncheon meeting here.

A text of his remarks was released prior to presentation.

Artists of all kinds should be encouraged to explore the services provided by commercial and public radio and television, National Film Board, schools systems, community colleges, university extension programs and community cable broadcasting, said Fortier.

His remarks were principally aimed at the visual arts because, he commented "it is there that the problems are most acute."

"In Canada we are experiencing the mixed blessing of an explosion of interest in the arts . . . and no parallel increase in hard cash support."

This year the Canada Council has $35 million at its disposal for fine arts grants he said. The needs, however, are far greater than available funds, he added.

"We think there are about 3,000 professional painters, sculptors and print-makers in this country . . . many are fine artists. However, in all last year, we were able to assist only 244 of these deserving people through our grants," Fortier said.

He noted that the example could be duplicated for each one of the arts fields in which Canada Council is active.

Looking at a broader spectrum, beyond the immediate concerns of the arts community, Fortier referred to the guaranteed income proposals which are frequently advanced by the federal government.

"I am told that what our government planners are probably going to recommend in fact is some kind of income supplement for specific groups. I am sure you will agree that government planners must include artistic activity among those forms of low-paid work that should be supported, without stigma, in this affluent society," he said.

The new Council for Business and the Arts in Canada with a goal of stepping up corporate contributions to at least $35 million a year by 1980, and the Canada Council Touring Office which helps to bring the artists to the people, were mentioned as positive moves.

But with the expanding of fine arts faculties in Canadian universities and colleges, "We shall soon be developing young artists in our fine arts faculties on a scale (and at a cost) that our economy cannot support," said Fortier.

"We are helping to professionalize creative talent, but we are sending these new professionals out into a market that in many instances simply isn't there."

Pilgrims Drown

RIO DE JANEIRO (AP) — More than 60 religious pilgrims aboard a Brazilian river boat were killed Tuesday when the craft sank on a tributary of the Amazon River, the Jornal do Brasil news agency reports.

The victims, the agency says, were mostly women and children. Officials were investigating reports the craft was overloaded.

The agency says 10 bodies were pulled from the waters of the remote Solimoes River where the riverboat Freire II sank shortly after dawn.

Trudeau Presents Music Awards

OTTAWA — The first International Music Council Awards were presented Wednesday by Prime Minister Trudeau in honor of violinist Yehudi Menuhin, Indian sitarist Ravi Shankar and the late Russian composer Dmitri Shostakovich.

Trudeau presented the awards — Eskimo soapstone sculptures in the form of Canadian loons — following a 90-minute solo recital by Menuhin marking International Music Day. Menuhin is president of the council.

Speaking for the three award winners Menuhin said the prime minister had found the link between discipline and harmony in both music and politics.

"Some need more of the one and some need more of the other," he added.

He said Trudeau was the first prime minister of Canada to show an interest in and an appreciation of good music.

The awards are to be presented by the council at its biennial conferences, and are to take the form of art works distinctive to the host country.

WASHINGTON — According to Sen. Barry Goldwater, Russian spies have "absolutely infiltrated" the U.S. and there may even be some on Capitol Hill.

The Arizona Republican, in a televised interview, said he will ask senate intelligence investigators to look into a finding that the Soviets have infiltrated "seven or nine" senate offices.

PRAGUE — Canadian Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan, heading a delegation of experts, flew into Prague Wednesday for an official visit following an invitation by Czechoslovak Agriculture Minister Bohuslav Vecera. Whelan will tour an agricultural machinery plant at Agrostroj, visit three state farms and a famous Czech health spa.

OTTAWA — "I am definitely not in the running," former federal finance minister John Turner said Wednesday when asked if he was considering trying for the Ontario Liberal leadership.

TORONTO — Derek Bate, 22, coach and assistant conductor with the Canadian Opera Company, was presented the 1975 Jean A. Chalmers Award on Tuesday at the O'Keefe Centre after the company's performance of Die Fledermaus.

The prize, which includes a $1,000 award, is presented annually to a member of the company who has shown great promise either as a performer or in the area of opera production.

LOS ANGELES — A Beverly Hills, Calif., woman, who charges that British rock star Elton John left her home uninhabitable after he rented it for a year, is suing him for $70,000.

John paid $42,000 to rent the ornately furnished mansion until May 31 this year.

Iris Schirmer says in a Superior Court suit filed Wednesday that John and his friends burned cigarette holes in a custom-made rug, bent silver candlesticks, cut holes in the walls and took crystal glassware.

She is seeking $20,000 damages and $50,000 in lost rent.

VANCOUVER — James Gillies, a federal Progressive Conservative party leadership contender, said Tuesday the party has to move to the right and clearly establish in voters' minds that its policies differ from the Liberals.

Gillies, the party's parliamentary energy and resources critic and member for Toronto-Don Valley, told a press conference he was in British Columbia to sound out reaction of the province's Conservatives to his leadership aspirations and policy views.

BUFFALO, N.Y. — Anne Randolph Hearst, sister of Patricia Hearst, has completed a four-month probationary period on a drug charge and her conviction has been vacated, U.S. district Judge John T. Curtin said Wednesday.

Hearst, 19, appeared before Curtin last June on charges stemming from a March 4 incident in which she allegedly brought 12 amphetamine tablets into the U.S. from Canada.

1976 Mercury Grand Marquis Brougham 4-Door Pillared Hardtop

Luxury is well within your reach with Marquis, the first of 3 luxurious series from Mercury. Mercury has a reputation for a superb ride, a high level of luxury and true value. There are 6 new exterior colours, standard. For '76, stylish options include a striking new tutone exterior with complementing interiors of tan/saddle or cream/gold on Marquis Brougham and Grand Marquis 2-Door Hardtops, new Landau vinyl roof and forged aluminum wheels.

Your Mercury dealer has an exciting line-up of 1976 cars — and we're talking about more than style, comfort and ride.

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) has just tested the 1976 cars and the U.S. results (sales-weighted) for the big 3 auto makers show that Ford Motor Company cars are #1 in fuel economy.

More specifically, 1976 Ford Motor Company cars achieved an average mileage of 20.7 miles per gallon and an improvement of 27% over the 1975's.

These mileage statistics are a combination of EPA city and highway test results, converted to Imperial gallons.

The engines in the 1976 Mercury carlines have been refined for improved fuel economy and better driveability in terms of easier starting, better stop-and-go response and smoother acceleration.

In addition, there are lower-cost optional engines designed to run on lower-priced regular gasoline that's readily available anywhere.

See your Mercury dealer today.

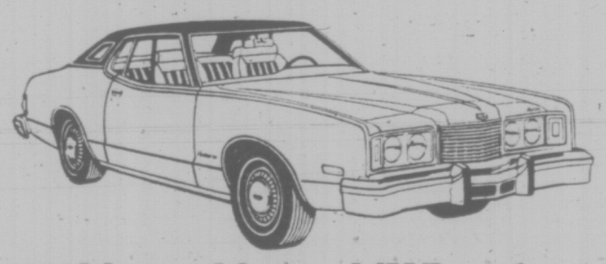
1976 Mercury Cougar XR-7 2-Door Hardtop

It's like nobody else's car. This year the mid-size Cougar puts the accent on personal luxury with beautifully exciting interiors including the new optional tutone gold/cream combination. Standard features include automatic transmission, radial tires, solid-state ignition, and an elegantly-styled Flight bench seat. An expanded list of options including high-back front bucket seats and centre console helps you make the Cougar XR-7 a truly personal mid-size luxury car.



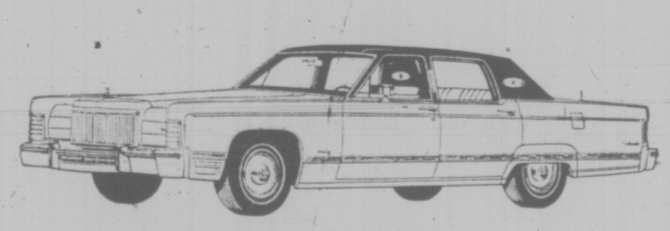
1976 Mercury Montego MX Brougham 2-Door Hardtop

Dollar for dollar, feature for feature, it's one of the best mid-size cars on the road today. In '76, even the lowest-priced Montego is well equipped and comes with standard features like power steering, power front disc brakes, Select-Shift automatic transmission, and a very responsive 351 V8 engine with improved fuel economy. Choose from new exterior colours and desirable options to make your Montego match your lifestyle.

U.S. EPA standardized test results (sales-weighted) have been and are being used by automotive manufacturers for fuel-economy statements. Such tests are performed on a dynamometer to simulate city and highway driving. Because the average figures cover many engine and transmission combinations and optional equipment, the car you choose may perform differently. Furthermore, the gas mileage you actually get depends on you. Your type of driving. Your driving habits. Road and weather conditions. And how your car is maintained.

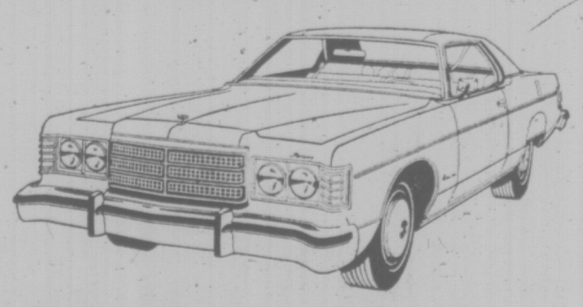
*The Bobcat Special MPG 2-Door Sedan, equipped with 2.3 litre engine and 4-speed manual transmission, achieved a rating of 29.8 MPG (city) and 45.2 MPG (highway) in EPA tests.

Certain items mentioned or illustrated are optional at additional cost.



1976 Lincoln Continental 4-Door Sedan

The year of individuality begins with the Lincoln Continental. Graceful by design, Lincoln Continental exemplifies elegance, prestige and performance. The wide range of standard features may be complemented with a host of luxury options that let you build your Continental to suit your personal preferences. Lincoln Continental, luxury that endures.



1976 Mercury Meteor Rideau 500 2-Door Hardtop

Quiet comfort, great ride, all at an affordable price make Mercury Meteor a solid and sensible value. Meteor comes with a family-size interior (accommodates six adults), and there is a big deep well trunk. Add to this the standard fuel-efficient 351 V8 engine and great interior appointments and you have the true meaning of value in an automobile. Optional features include two new vinyl roof colours, forged aluminum wheels and AM/FM Multiplex Search radio.

Bruins, Blades Are Favored For Top Spots

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

New Westminster Bruins and Saskatoon Blades, the finalists in the Western Canada Hockey League's championship series last spring, appear to be favorites to top their respective divisions again this season.

Victoria Cougars will be contenders. Edmonton Oil Kings and Winnipeg Clubs may show surprising improvement, while Flin Flon Bombers and Calgary Centennials are unanimous choice to miss next spring's playoffs.

That's one man's prediction, influenced by opinions from various WCHL coaches and managers.

Saskatoon comes closer than anyone to drawing a unanimous vote for a first-place finish in the Eastern Division of the 12-team league. If it goes as expected, the Blades will make the first-place sprint in the East as exciting as a dentist's drill.

With or without defenceman Gord Roberts, the Cougars will have their work cut out for them if they plan to finish ahead of New Westminster in the Western Division.

As a matter of fact, Victoria may have to struggle to wind up ahead of Edmonton. There's one vital "if" attached to Oil Kings' expected improvement: If new coach Doug Messier finds or develops a capable goaltender, Edmonton fans will quickly forget their out-of-the-playoffs finish of last season.

Centennials, who help Cougars open their home stand with Saturday night's meeting at Memorial Arena, won only 11 of 70 games last season. Sophomore coach Dave Amadio sees improvement but it won't be dramatic enough.

Cougars won more games (47) and amassed more points (99) than any other team, but even coach Pat Ginnell admits Victoria will have "a problem" with New Westminster.

Here in brief, a look at the teams, their prospects, strengths, weaknesses and predicted order of finish and if we're wrong, don't call us . . . we'll all you):

WESTERN DIVISION

1. New Westminster: An improved defence and a potentially powerful attack has coach Ernest McLean smiling, so who in New Westminster cares if goaltenders Kerry Nisbett and Carey Walker are the Bruins" only question marks? Last season's playoff champions are set on defence with Brad Maxwell, Barrry Beck and Terry Hochstetter returning. Up front, Mark Lofthouse, Steve Clippingdale, Fred Berry, Harold Phillipoff and Kevin Schameborn are assurance of two strong scoring lines. The Bruins have size, so you have to believe McLean when he says this year's edition "is better" than last season's champions.

2. Victoria: Cougars will miss Mel Bridgman, Peter Morris and Don Cairns, who contributed strongly to the team's record-setting goals total, but Ginnel recruits well and has a habit of getting maximum performances from his players. Jim Gustafson, All Hill and Rick Martin are back as over-age players along with holdovers Dan Lucas (57 goals), Curt Fraser, Timm Williams, Rick Peter and Lorry Gloeckner. Look for Fraser to do big things on attack. Williams and Gloeckner will come into their own but Ginnell's "set" defence isn't as set as he expected when New England Whalers signed Roberts to a pro contract. There's still hope Roberts will return and Ginnell is satisfied that Gerry Sinclair and Dan Rogers will provide the club with better goaltanding than it got last season. The acquisition of Jeff McDill from Flin Flon is also a big plus.

3. Edmonton: Messier inherited 13 holdover regulars but none play goal as well as graduate Doug Soetaert. John Phillips, Dave Morrow and Doug Johnston supply experience on defence. Spruce Grove Mets, who won the Canadian tier two championship, supply the fill-in material from the farm.

4. Kamloops: If the Chiefs beat out Medicine Hat Tigers, it will be because coach Harvey Roy will get excellent goaltending from holdovers Mark Earp and Brian Henderson. Four holdovers — Reg Kerr, Barry Melrose, Dave Robinson and Craig Topolinsky — are back on defence. Roy also has seven returning forwards and has been highly impressed by newcomers Ryan Walter (up for good from the Langley farm), six-foot-two Dan Clark and Dave Johnston.

EASTERN DIVISION

1. Saskatoon: Even with question marks on defence, Randy Ireland will be one of the premier goaltenders in the league. Four of Blades' top five scorers — Bernie Federko, Blair Chapman, Wes Peters and Fred Williams — are back. The opposition will do well to hold those four under the 200-goal mark.

2. Regina: Coach Bob Turner hasn't called on any over-age players to hang around, but his river-skaters (they can go all day) will be touch. Rob Tudor, Jon Hammond, Al Dumba and Drew Callander form the nucleus on attack. Only 17, holdover Dean Tidball will be the leader on defence. Goaltending may be adequate.

3. Lethbridge: Bigger and more aggressive, coach Earl Ingarfield has recruited well. Several rookies have played strongly in exhibitions. Brian Salter is the only proven goal-scorer returning. As is the case with so many clubs this season, goaltending again is the big question.

5. Medicine Hat: On the average, Tigers are 10 pounds heavier than last year and Jack Shupe predicts better netminding with the arrival of Peter Peeters, a juvenile from Edmonton, and Jim Scammell, late of Vernon. Cliff Lane, John Hilworth and Darrell Durrand are back but defence is a question mark. Don Murdoch scored 82 goals last season but rookie Gary Gilchrist, up from Vernon, emerged as Tigers' top scorer in seven pre-season games.

6. Calgary: Amadio is on his own after the recent death of owner-manager Scotty Munro. Scotty had a habit of transforming his players from a "team" into a "family." Holdovers Mike Fynn, Kirk Fyfe and Dave Colbourne will carry the scoring load but may get help from Don Blault, a 190-pound centre who played with Bellingham Blazers in the B.C. Junior League last season.

4. Winnipeg: Lorne Molleken and Murray Bannerman are back in goal and new coach George Dorman went looking for size. Greg Kostenko, 17, is the best example of new physical additions. Kevin McCarthy, an all-star at 17, is back on defence; Gord Blumenheim, Guy Lash, Grant Eakin and rookie Gerry Pion show potential of a strong attack.

5. Brandon: Dunc McCallum replaces Norm Johnson as coach and starts out without the likes of Rick Blight (60 goals) and Dale McMullin. Dan Bonar is a solid bet to succeed as the Wheat Kings' scoring leader, and Glen Hanlon will be big in goal, if he isn't overworked to death.

6. Flin Flon: Dale Rideout's netminder may help Bombers win a few games, and holdover Rich Gosselin and Mark Davidson will finish 1-2 in club scoring. After that, however, the ranks are thin unless some of the rookies come through in a big way.

MUHAMMAD ALI

ALI, JOE HEDGE ON RETIREMENT

MANILA (AP) — Muhammad Ali and Joe Frazier both hedged on retirement plans today as they prepared to leave the scene of one of the greatest heavyweight title fights in ring history.

"I don't want to retire as much today as I did after the fight yesterday," world titleholder Ali said.

"Tomorrow I will want to retire even less. Somebody will come up with a big stack of money and I will be anxious to go again."

Earlier, Frazier, calling a formal news conference, said that, despite pleading of his family to hang up his gloves, he will not make up his mind until he has explored all the alternatives with his trainer and advisor, Eddie Futch.

"I may say I will retire and then, after a couple of weeks, I will want to get my motor cranked up one more time," he said.

Both Ali and Frazier wore dark glasses to hide the damage around their eyes suffered in the fight that ended with Frazier's trainer asking the referee to stop the fight before the bell for the 15th and final round.

Most ringsiders felt Futch made the proper decision, believing Frazier almost certainly would have been knocked out and maybe injured for life had he been permitted to continue.

The champion said he saw no reason that Frazier should retire from the ring. "I don't think he should just because I beat him," Ali said. "After all, he lost to the fastest, greatest fighter of all time. He is younger than I am. He proved he is one hell of a fighter against me."

Discussing his rally when Frazier appeared to have taken charge in the middle rounds, Ali said: "I knew if I didn't pull it out at the end, I might lose. The referee and officials were against me.

"But people don't understand. I start thinking what it would mean if I lost. I was thinking of all the people all over the world pulling for me. Some die of heart attacks when I lose.

"Now Frazier goes into airports and people say, 'Sorry you lost, champ.' I didn't want that happening to me. In a situation like that, I reach down mentally and think of all that is involved."

Ken Norton, who won by a decision over the champion and then absorbed a loss by a decision, is demanding a third fight. Ali said he would like Norton to face George Foreman first—and then he might take on the winner.

IT'S UP TO THE CHAMP TO PATCH UP MARRIAGE

CHICAGO (AP) — Belinda Ali, the wife of world heavyweight boxing champion Muhammad Ali, says she doesn't plan a divorce and is prepared "right now just to move with the punches."

But she said Wednesday it is up to her husband to patch up their marriage, rocked by Ali's keeping company with other women, and that her husband's female companion in Manila was no friend of hers.

Belinda returned to Chicago after a hurried trip last week to Manila when she heard Ali was introducing model Veronica Porsche as his wife during prefight functions for his bout with Joe Frazier.

"Anybody can get a divorce," said Belinda when asked if the Muslim religion permits it. "But I don't plan to, because I'm not going to let one lady, or two ladies, or three ladies, make me get out. I'm not about to walk out."

Belinda and Ali have been married for eight years and have four children.

Kings' Dionne In the Spotlight

The occasion is an exhibition contest between the Canucks, winners of three of their four games, and the Los Angeles Kings.

The Kings feature centre Marcel Dionne, obtained in the off-season trade with Detroit Red Wings. A much-discussed deal, the Kings got Dionne, who had 47 goals and 74 assists last season, for defenceman Terry Harper and winger Dan Maloney.

And while Maloney is a good acquisition for the Red Wings, the veteran Harper has not reported to the Detroit team.

Unfortunately for the Kings, they have not been able to replace Maloney or Harper and are reported to be discussing a trade with several teams, including the Canucks.

The Kings should certainly provide Vancouver with plenty of competition tonight. Last year they earned 103 points, fourth highest total in the 18-team league. However, they lost to Toronto Maple Leafs in the first round of the playoffs.

For the Canucks, tonight's appearance will be their second and final exhibition game at Memorial Arena. In their first game here Sunday, they downed California Seals 3-1.

In exhibition play Wednesday, Toronto Maple Leafs defeated Buffalo Sabres 6-0, New York Rangers blanked Boston Bruins 4-0, Montreal Canadiens beat Chicago Black Hawks 6-3, New York Islanders tied 1-1 with Atlanta Flames and St. Louis Blues and Pittsburgh Penguins tied 4-4 in a game interrupted in the second period by a bench-clearing brawl.

Tiger-Cats Fumble Chance to Argos

By The Canadian Press

Hamilton Tiger-Cats have fumbled the ball back to Toronto Argonauts in the battle for the Eastern Football Conference's last playoff spot while the injury-riddled Ottawa Rough Riders are back in first place.

The Riders beat the Ticats 16-11 in a game Wednesday night that saw only the defences score touchdowns.

The Ticats, who held a 4-1 half-time lead and could have moved into third place ahead of the Argos with a victory, now will have to sit and watch while Toronto tries to improve its one-point margin in tonight's game against Winnipeg Blue Bombers.

The Argos, whose 3-8 record is little more impressive than Hamilton's 2-8-1, tonight expect to have newcomer Steve Joachim starting at quarterback in an attempt to wake up the sleepy Toronto offence.

The Riders, who now lead the conference by two points over second-place Montreal Alouettes, head home to lick their wounds. Injuries have plagued the Ottawa lineup in recent weeks and the lastest blow was Wednesday night's loss of defensive back Rod Woodward who broke his left arm on a fourth-quarter kick return play.

Woodward provided evidence of his value to the club when he returned an interception of a Jerry Keeling pass 63 yards for a third-quarter touchdown that put Ottawa ahead for the first time in the game.

MacPhail: Dynamic, Bombastic and Smart

LARRY MacPHAIL
. . . many contributions

MIAMI (AP) — Larry MacPhail, a baseball innovator who revolutionized the game, will be buried Friday in the small Michigan town of Cass City, where he was born and raised.

MacPhail, who installed the first lights in a major league baseball park, thereby allowing night games, died Wednesday morning in a Miami nursing home. He was 85.

"Larry MacPhail was dynamic, bombastic and smart," said Gabe Paul, president of New York Yankees. "He made many contributions to baseball and I have a special place in my heart and my memories for him."

The first club president to fly his team to all road games and who tapped the Caribbean as a fertile ground for exhibitions and training camps, MacPhail built Cincinnati Reds, Brooklyn Dodgers and the Yankees into pennant winners. He retired from baseball after his 1947 Yankees won the World Series.

"I'm finished," he said following the Yanks' victory over the Dodgers. "I promised my wife I'd retire when a team of mine won a World Series."

MacPhail entered the sport in 1930 when he purchased the Columbus, Ohio, Senators of the American Association for $100,000. He rebuilt the team's park, adding lights, and quickly turned the club into a pennant winner. Then he sold it to Sam Breadon of St. Louis Cardinals for a profit.

He then took over Cincinnati Reds in 1933, a last-place team that was in debt. MacPhail installed lights there and got his friend, the late president Franklin D. Roosevelt, to switch them on.

Before long, MacPhail built a winner and the Reds won the National League pennant in 1939 and 1940, just after MacPhail retired from baseball for the first time.

He returned to baseball to do a similar rescue operation on the Dodgers. In Brooklyn's first night game after MacPhail installed lights, Johnny Vander Meer of Cincinnati pitched his second consecutive no-hit game.

But the Dodgers won the National League flag in 1941 and finished second in 1942 before MacPhail left the game once more, this time to join an army unit during the Second World War.

After the war, he purchased the Yankees and returned them to power while introducing Old Timers' Day to Yankee Stadium.

Chiefs Boosted By Power Play

KAMLOOPS — Kamloops Chiefs used the power play to chalk up a 3-2 win Wednesday over Calgary Centennials in the Western Canada Hockey League opener for both teams before 1,650 fans.

Kelly Ferner scored two goals with a man advantage to lead the Chiefs with Barry Melrose adding the third goal. Darcy Galvon and rookie Don Blault replied for Calgary.

The teams were tied 1-1 after the opening period and Kamloops led 2-1 going into the final 20 minutes.

Calgary's Mike Fynn was tagged with a match penalty, which means an automatic suspension, after a first-period fight with Rob Flockhart. Length of the suspension will be decided by league president Ed Chynoweth.

Chiefs held a wide margin in play, outshooting the Centennials 43-21. Danny Shearer was in goal for Calgary while Mark Earp was the Kamloops goalie.

Fuller Lake Tops Flyers

CHEMAINUS — Fuller Lake Flyers downed Esquimalt Legion 6-3 Wednesday in the final South Vancouver Island Junior "B" Hockey League exhibition game.

Greg Chadwick had two goals and Terry Ellison, Tracey Sherwood, Gene Wrigglesworth and Doug Lafleur one each for the Flyers.

The league opener is Friday at 8 p.m. when the Legion plays Juan de Fuca Gulls at Esquimalt Sports Centre.

Richest Pole Prize

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) Using a specially built engine, David Pearson shattered his qualifying record Wednesday when he won the richest pole prize in the history of stock car racing.

Pearson throttled his Wood Brothers Mercury around the 1.5-mile high banked Charlotte Motor Speedway at a speed of 161.01 miles per hour to win $10,400 and the inside front row starting position for Sunday's 16th annual National 500, which carries a purse of $170,415.

Pearson's old mark was 158.749 m.p.h. which he set in time trials for the 1974 National 500.

Last-Ditch Basket Sinks Canadians

LETHBRIDGE (CP) — Johnny Davis of the United States national basketball team hit a jump shot with only 15 seconds remaining to give the U.S. A 69-68 triumph over Canada's national team Wednesday.

Canada had built up an eight-point lead with only 4:28 remaining in the game, but saw the Americans pull within one point with 45 seconds left.

Lars Hansen, who led the Canadian attack with 20 points, had the opportunity to give Canada the game with six seconds left, but his 10-foot jumper bounced harmlessly off the rim.

Senior Curlers Elect Sutherland

Jack Jenkins of New Westminster was named vice-president.

George Ties It

George Fuller hammered in a goal at 18:28 of the third period Wednesday night to give Victoria Western Homes Buckaroos a 5-5 deadlock with James Bay Athletic Association Gulls in the season opener of the Big Six Hockey League at Juan de Fuca Arena.

McAllister's New Job Is a Real Mouthful

SOCCER

Bill McAllister is no longer B.C.'s technical director for soccer — but he's happy.

Bill has a new job as a kind of overseer of coaching in the province for hockey, basketball, volleyball, baseball, track and field, swimming and, yes, soccer. And he hopes that in his new post he will be able to impress on those involved in all the sports the real purpose of coaching and the meaning of success.

Now 50, Scottish-born McAllister retired last year from his post of athletic director at Royal Roads Military College and became B.C.'s first director for soccer.

McAllister, who had acted as Canada's national soccer coach on a part-time basis while at Royal Roads, was replaced by German-born Erkhardt Krautzan. But Krautzan soon became frustrated with the way Canadian soccer officials did things and resigned. McAllister had to apply for a seven-week leave of absence from his job here to take Canada's team into a pre-Olympic tournament.

"The approach was suicidal," Bill remembers. "We had only five days to prepare to meet Poland, the third-best team in the world, and lost 8-1." The team improved toward the end of the tournament, however, and the next time it met Poland the score was 4-1.

It was during that tournament that McAllister decided he was through with the national team.

Bill was replaced by his assistant, a young English pro named Colin Morris who was serving as Nova Scotia's technical soccer director. And in a few days, Morris will be taking the Canadian squad down to Mexico to play in the Pan-Am Games. And once again, despite all McAllister's urgings, there has been very little preparation done and no attempt at all made to train at an altitude where the players could become acclimatized to the Mexican height.

Bob Bolitho and Brian Robinson of Victoria and Ray Telford of Nanaimo are on the national team and Victoria's John McGuire has been invited to "team concentration" — a get-together of 22 players before the final travelling squad of 17 is named.

Also going will be Tony Chursky, John Connor and Victor Kodelja, all of Vancouver and newcomer Severino (Reno) Agostinis of Kimberley, one of the "undiscovered stars" McAllister promised to find when he took over as soccer director.

The talented Agostinis was spotted by a referee who filled in one of Bill's scouting cards.

"We always knew there had to be good players in these northern areas, and getting this boy on the national team proves the system works," he says.

Officially, McAllister's new title is provincial co-ordinator of coaching development and certification program, which he admits is "a hell of a mouthful."

But Bill sees it as "a far more general job, as it deals with the different kinds of sport, ensuring that we have coaches who have a better understanding, are more capable, are more confident and are more aware of the importance of the part they play in the development of a young person's attitude to sport.

"And mostly," he says with a smile, "what I want to get across is the message that success as a coach is not synonymous with winning or losing. Success is synonymous with development."

Firing of Mauch Seen as Coverup

MONTREAL (CP) — Last Wednesday night as Gene Mauch strolled to a position near second base at Jarry Park, a chorus of boos rose from the crowd.

The fans were showing that they do not appreciate the managing efforts of Mauch, who guided the Expos to an unspectacular fifth-place tie with Chicago Cubs in the National League's East Division.

"The reason I decided to come out here is that I knew a lot of you would get a kick out of it," Mauch told the crowd. "Now that you've had a kick out of it, I want to introduce to you for the last time . . . this season . . . a bunch of guys you're going to be cheering for a long, long time."

Mauch could have stopped his second sentence with "last time," because he will no longer be introducing Expos players to Montreal baseball fans.

A week after his hostile reception from Montreal's baseball fans, Mauch's career with the seven-year-old Expos is history. Mauch, 49, was fired Wednesday along with all of his coaches — pitching coach Cal McLish, third-base coach Dave Bristol, first-base coach Walt Hriniak, bullpen coach Jerry Zimmerman and part-time batting instructor Duke Snider.

Hriniak will be moved to a position in the Expos' minor league organization while Snider will continue as a color man on the Expos baseball telecasts on CBC.

"It was the worst thing they could do," said pitcher Steve Renko in an interview from Kansas City. "Gene Mauch is a super man and a super manager. I'll tell you one thing, he never ever put the blame on any of his players.

"I think they fired him to cover up for themselves. Fans booing him? Do they know as much about baseball as Gene Mauch?

"Gene Mauch is one of the finest managers in baseball. What did they expect us to do this year with all the young guys? We won 75 games with them and the most we ever won with experienced players was 79.

"Anyway, I don't mind what I say because I doubt if I'll be there next year."

Mauch won 499 and lost 627 games during his tenure with Montreal. He was hired Sept. 5, 1968, after being fired by Philadelphia Phillies of the National League June 16, 1968. He had been managing in Philadelphia from 1960 after taking over from Eddie Sawyer.

Expos president John McHale said the fans had a bearing on the decision but added that they were not a major factor.

"We must always listen to our fans," he said. "We were convinced they were looking for and wanted a change."

Mauch's wife, Nina Lee, said her husband was not upset.

Mauch's contract, scheduled to run out in 1976, will be honored by the Expos if the former manager obtains a position not related to baseball. But should Mauch obtain another baseball job, the Expo's would make up the difference between Mauch's salary here and the pay he would receive at his new job.

The Expos' poor performance was reflected in a drop in attendance of 110,842. They attracted 908,202, down from 1,019,134, in 1974, their previous low.

European Soccer Favorites March On

Favorites, headed by Borussia Moenchengladbach and Bayern Munich of West Germany, marched into the second round of the major European soccer tournaments Wednesday.

Borussia and Bayern advanced after first-round, second-leg matches in European Cup play. Wednesday's competition also included first-round, second-leg matches in the Cup-Winners Cup and European Football Union Cup.

Bayern Munich, which qualified as defending champion, cruised through its second-leg match against Luxembourg's Jeunesse d'Esch, extending a 5-0 lead it took in the away leg to 8-1. Bayern won despite the absence of the injured Gerd Mueller and Uli Hoeness. Hoeness.

Borussia, which succeeded Bayern as West German champions, visited SW Innsbruck of Austria, which held its rivals to a 1-1 draw two weeks ago in Germany, and broke the match open in the second half with World Cup star Jupp Heynckes scoring four goals in a 6-1 win for a 7-2 aggregate.

Zurich had the toughest luck after the club from Switzerland had wiped out by half-time a four-goal deficit from Hungary against Ujpest Dozsa.

The match ended 5-1 but the Hungarians second-half goal carried them through on the away-goals rule, which gives two goals to the visiting team if the final match ends in a tie.

One of the highest scoring teams in UEFA Cup play was the Dutch champion PSV Eindhoven which put Northern Ireland's Linfield on the sidelines. Eindhoven's 8-0 win carried the club through on a 10-1 aggregate.

The other Irish teams also fared badly. Home Farm Dublin lost, 6-0, and was eliminated from the Cup Winners Cup by RC Lens, France, which posted a 7-1 aggregate triumph.

Bohemians drew, 1-1, with Rangers of Scotland but lost, 5-2, on aggregate and was eliminated from the European Cup and Vaalerengen Oslo, Norway drew, 1-1, with Athlone Town in a UEFA match but elliminated the Irish team, 4-2, on the aggregate.

In other UEFA matches involving United Kingdom teams, Ipswich Town blanked Feyenoord of Rotterdam, Holland 2-0, for a 4-1 aggregate triumph; Milan, Italy shut out Everton, 1-0, for a 1-0 aggregate win; Antwerp, Belgium defeated Aston Villa, 1-0, for a 5-1 victory.

Meanwhile in Cup Winners Cup play, Celtic of Scotland trounced Valur Reykjavik, Iceland, 7-0, and won 9-0, on aggregate; and West Ham United blanked Reipas Lahti, Finland, 3-0, for a 5-2 aggregate victory.

Derby County stayed alive in the European Cup with a 3-0 victory and 3-1 aggregate triumph over Bratislava, Czechoslovakia.

Volleyball Clinic

Camosun College and the B.C. Volleyball Association have scheduled a five-week volleyball clinic for all persons wishing to earn Canadian coaching certification in the sport.

The course will start Oct. 7 and run for five successive Tuesdays (7 to 10 p.m.) at Camosun College. Provincial coach Vic Lindal will be the instructor for three sessions while University of Victoria men's coach Al Scott and UVic women's coach Kent Andrews will each handle one session.

Those interested in joining the program may register with the Community Services department at Camosun. There will be a $5 registration fee.

Milwaukee Interested

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Milwaukee Brewers have added the name of Gene Mauch to their list of "seven or eight" potential managerial candidates for the American League baseball team, general manager Jim Baumer said Wednesday.

Mauch had been fired earlier Wednesday as Montreal Expos manager. Hank Aaron, the Brewers' 41-year-old designated hitter and baseball's career home run leader, is the only other known candidate to succeed Del Crandall, fired Sunday.

Incentive for Cohos

Heading into the club's ninth season, officials of the Juan de Fuca Coho Swim Club have announced plans for a program of incentive tours for the 1974-75 campaign.

All Coho swimmers will have opportunities to earn places on the tour squads by achieving time standards set by the club for various age classes.

Swimmers wishing to join the Cohos may obtain information by calling Leona Osowetski at 478-8384 during the day, or Mrs. Phil Harris at 478-4836.

Jim Slater added two goals for Nanaimo. Each club drew 16 penalties, including a match penalty apiece.

In the only other game scheduled, Gerald Mykituk scored twice, including the winner in sudden-death overtime, to give Maple Ridge (formerly Bellingham) Blazers an 8-7 decision over host Langley Lords.

B.C. Pen Chief Defends Solitary

Times News Services

VANCOUVER — Recalling his own six months spent in solitary confinement, B.C. Penitentiary director Dragon Cernetic Wednesday defended the solitary confinement system at the penitentiary.

Cernetic was incarcerated in his native Yugoslavia in 1950 on charges of counter-revolutionary activity.

He spent 22 days in a "strip cell' with no lights, no bedding and very little food, he told a Federal court of Canada hearing.

During that time, he was allowed no visits, no correspondence, no exercise and very little reading material, he added.

Asked what effect he felt this period had on his later life, Cernetic said it was hard to estimate since he was in his early 20s at the time and under possible sentence of death from the Tito regime.

Beds in B.C. Pen solitary units" had no springs because springs could be taken apart and used as bateering rams, and a 25-watt bulb burns all night because each cell must be checked every 20 minutes, Cernetic said.

The heating and ventilation unit is sealed and could not be controlled by prisoners or guards, and there are problems in the heating system design, he added.

Eight B.C. Penitentiary prisoners are seeking a court declaration that the prison's solitary confinement unit is cruel and unusual punishment under the Canadian Bill of Rights.

Prisoners and expert witnesses have testified for seven days and Wednesday the case began for the defence.

Cernetic said it was a standing order that "tear gas will be used to suppresss disturbances and protect government property," but that it could not be used without authorization from an officer in charge of the institution.

Since he took charge of the penitentiary in 1974 there have been two or three complaints about tear gas but there were "no grounds to believe gas has been used by anybody unauthorized," he added.

Answering prisoners' allegations that firearms are pointed at them while they are getting their meals, Cernetic said there could have been "inadvertent pointing of firearms while an officer was in an awkward position by someone who is excited or by someone who has not read the appropriate instructions."

Solitary confinement prisoners can receive as many visits as normal prisoners, but are required to use the closed visit area which allows no contact between visitor and prisoners, he added.

He agreed that solitary confinement prisoners were not allowed hobbies because of previous problems, and no educational programs were allowed for prisoners under 30-day punishment.

The men normally had no choice of books, but a cart-load, changed once a week, was provided.

Cernetic said regulations require the prison director to visit the solitary unit daily, but that he personally visited the unit, with a door-to-door check, "on an average of once a week or perhaps twice a month."

Six assistant prisons directors fulfill the daily visit requirement.

Shortly after his arrival at the penitentiary he visited all the plaintiffs without the presence of other staff, adding that prisoners could write to their classification officers, the prison ombudsman, their MP and federal penitentiary commissioners, he added.

FRENCH POSE PROBLEM

VANCOUVER (CP) — Dr. John Duffy, a psychiatrist, says the wanderlust of some schizorphrenics shows in the population of Riverview hospital's Riverside unit.

As a result, there is a higher proportion of French-Canadians in Riverside, than any other ethnic group, he added.

Duffy was addressing the national conference of provincial boards of review, the advisory bodies which determine whether people detained under government orders should be released.

People with schizophrenia tend to wander the length and breadth of Canada and, to French-Canadians with such a condition, Vancouver is the end of the line, he said.

"It is comparatively easy for such patients to go unrecognized while they are hitchhiking," he said. "They usually come to light after they have attempted to settle in the city."

A remand of up to 30 days for a psychiatric examination is invaluable because it gives time for a temporary psychosis to clear, Duffy added.

Duffy mentioned French-Canadians during his argument that some patients who have been found unfit to stand trial are suffering from a temporary psychosis that soon clears.

"It is clear that a person may be unfit to stand trial on one day, and yet his fitness may be regained within a few days or weeks," Duffy said.

Under the present system, he said, it is not possible to have the patient declared fit without going through the cumbersome process of obtaining a provincial cabinet order-in-council.

CONVICT GUILTY IN ESCAPE BID

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vincent Fitzgerald, 21, was found guilty Wednesday of wounding a constable and a deputy sheriff in an escape Nov. 29 from the British Columbia with three other prisoners from the Bri ish Columbia Penitentiary. Sentencing was delayed.

Fitzgerald had pleaded not guilty to both charges and said he panicked and fled from the elevator with the three others because he feared a possible beating by officers if he remained.

Fitzgerald, Gordon Andrews and Larry Marshall pleaded guilty to escaping lawful custody and stealing a car.

Andrews and Marshall also pleaded guilty to wounding constable R. H. Robinson and deputy sheriff Alan Druskin. Five other charges against the three have been stayed by the crown.

Both officers, who were unarmed, suffered slashes from a razor during the escape attempt. The prisoners had been subjected to a skin search before being taken into the elevator. Marshall testified that Andrews had managed to conceal the razor.

The Canadian Press distributed an erroneous report following the first two days of the trial that said Fitzgerald had pleaded guilty to the charge of wounding a constable.

Body Identified

VALEMOUNT (CP) — With the help of fingerprint records, RCMP have identified the body of a man found in an abandoned cabin near this community, 160 miles northeast of Kamloops. Police said the man, whose body was found July 8, was Joseph Aiden, 52, a former resident of St. John's.

$2M Heroin Haul

RICHMOND (CP) — Three men have been charged with conspiracy to traffick in heroin and possession of heroin for the purpose of trafficking following a multi-million-dollar drug bust by BCMP. The drug squad seized four pounds of heroin and $20,000 early Wednesday following a tip from Canada customs officials. Minimum street value of the seizure was $2 million, according to police.

$1,000 Salmon Fine

MISSION (CP) — Kenneth Egan of Vancouver was fined the maximum $1,000 in court Tuesday after pleading guilty to illegal possession of salmon. He was charged after Fisheries officers arrested him Sept. 19 near here with 983 pounds of salmo in his possession.

Search Called Off

SQUAMISH (CP) — RCMP Wednesday called off the search for Henny Hansen of Vancouver, a hiker believed missing in the Diamond Head area of Garibaldi Park since Sept. 22.

Car Kills Child

LANGLEY (CP) — Martin Gorcak, 3, of Langley, was killed Wednesday when he was struck by a car while playing in front of his home.

Pan-Am Extends Agreement

NEW YORK (Reuter) — Pan American World Airways said Tuesday it has concluded an interim extension of its revolving credit agreement with a group of 36 banks.

The company said the extension will facilitate negotiations now underway for a new revolving credit designed to meet the company's seasonal cash needs.

Closer Scrutiny Planned On Hospital Deaths

VANCOUVER (CP) — Hospital administrators will be sent a directive this month requiring them to save all chemicals and equipment used in operations where a patient died by "misadventure," health minister Dennis Cocke said Wednesday.

Cocke told the British Columbia Health Association's annual meeting that the directive will call for the appointment of a designated hospital staffer to supervise impounding of possible evidence, Cocke told the B.C. Health Association.

The move was precipitated by a case about a year ago in which a man died while undergoing knee surgery at Vancouver General Hospital and "other cases in the past," he said later.

Any decision to call in the hospital impounder would be made by the doctor in the operating room who would judge if the death were unusual or unexpected.

BCHA president John Senham said the new rule will not cause hospitals any problems as long as death occurring as a result of "high risk" surgery are excluded.

Hospital expenditures are "dangerously close" this year to the half-billion-dollar mark and are absorbing too large a fraction of the health budget, Cocke also told the meeting.

One answer is home care, he said, adding that last year home care nursing visits in B.C. increased 96 per cent, with 360,000 calls on 25,000 people.

The government is trying to work out a new system of payments for hospitals to encourage treatment of people as out-patients, he added. Hospitals are now paid according to the number of patient days in hospital.

Beef Squeeze To Last

OTTAWA (CP) — A commission studying the marketing of beef and veal said Wednesday it was unlikely to find ways to reduce significantly the cost-price squeeze facing beef producers.

The comment came in a special report on industry problems and it said nothing about the possible impact on consumer prices. An agriculture department official said a final report is expected by the end of the year.

The commission said many beef producers find their costs exceed returns from cattle sales.

Research and public hearings by the commission showed "a major difference between costs of production and current average selling prices.

"Even currently higher prices do not appear to cover the operating costs of the most efficient producers."

Improving the efficiency of the marketing system will not, by itself, close the cost-price gap, the report says.

But there is a need to improve the marketing system "to assure the consumer about the quality and grade of beef and its subproducts available at the retail level."

A commission spokesman said Canadians needed to be assured about inspection systems because of various problems. But it was not directly related to revelations this summer about tainted meat being sold for human consumption in Quebec.

It was not "linked to any particular development." There were problems because inspection of the beef industry "was handled by various governments."

A spokesman for the Food Prices Review Board said the report had not yet been received but would be carefully studied in the light of board studies which found the beef industry fairly efficient and basically sound in responding to market conditions.

A spokesman for Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan said the report had been studied by the cabinet. The minister would only say that "any more public understanding of the beef industry helps both the consumer and producer."

The final report may give the government strong recommendations for improving the marketing system, the spokesman said. Inspection standards would be upgraded as long as the consumer was willing to pay increased costs.

The commission was established in January because of government concern over high retail beef and veal prices and low returns to producers. It is headed by Maxwell Mackenzie, a businessman whose interests include the Coorsh meat-processing company.

Unwelcome In Saigon

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — "Practical considerations" prevent South Vietnam from taking back refugees who fled last April when the Communists took over, Saigon has told the U.N.

Reports from Washington said the U.S. government has decided to permit 1,600 refugees on Guam to return to their homeland at their request.

The spokesman said the UN was told that although South Vietnam does not "question the principle of repatriation, practical considerations prevented this from being implemented forthwith."

Paul Heads Tsartlips

Philip Paul was elected chief of the Tsartlip Indian band in Saanich Wednesday.

Paul said all band eligible voters turned out for the election. Councillors are: David Elliot, Sr., David Bartleman and Arthur Cooper.

They will hold office for two years.

But that's only the good news on the outside of the new Fords. Inside, you're bound to notice the impressive new interior trims. On a test drive of the '76 Granada you'll feel the new, improved ride. Similarly, a ride in the luxurious '76 LTD will reveal its famous quiet and comfort.

Inside and out, the '76 Fords come with a lot of good news for you. And there's more...

More good news: The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA*) has just tested the 1976 cars and the U.S. results for the big 3 auto makers show that Ford Motor Company cars are #1 in fuel economy.

More specifically, 1976 Ford Motor Company cars achieved an average mileage of 20.7 miles per gallon and an improvement of 27% over the 1975's.

These mileage statistics are a sales-weighted combination of EPA city and highway test results, converted to Imperial gallons.

Improvements in fuel economy have been achieved through engineering refinements, such as recalibrating engines for better spark timing and carburetion, and lowering the rear axle ratio.

From the Pinto to the Thunderbird, the engines on all Ford car lines have been refined for better fuel economy and improved driveability in terms of easier starting, better stop and go response, and smoother acceleration.

In addition, there are optional engines that run on lower priced regular gasoline that's readily available anywhere.

If you're particularly interested in fuel economy, you'll like our 2.3 litre MPG cars. The Ford Pinto MPG and the Mustang II MPG have both achieved impressive results in the recent 1976 EPA tests. Ask your Ford Dealer for details.

For those to whom good gas mileage is the most important concern, Ford introduces the Pinto Pony MPG with 2.3 litre engine and 4-speed stick shift. This car has been specially designed with less weight, and is offered with fewer options, to achieve outstanding fuel economy. In the EPA tests, the Pinto Pony MPG achieved 45.2 miles per gallon highway*, and 29.8 miles per gallon city*. And of equal importance, the Pinto Pony MPG car is priced competitively with the new North American subcompact.

Find out more about the mileage improvement story and all the other good news on the '76 Fords at your Ford Dealer now.

U.S. EPA standardized test results (sales-weighted) have been and are being used by automotive manufacturers for fuel-economy statements. Such tests are performed on a dynamometer to simulate city/highway driving. Because the average figures cover many engine and transmission combinations and optional equipment, the car you choose may perform differently. Furthermore, the gas mileage you actually get depends on you. Your type of driving. Your driving habits. Road and weather conditions. And how your car is maintained. All mileage results quoted have been converted to Imperial gallons.*

Homosexual Decision Backed

SASKATOON (CP) — Dr. R. W. Begg, president of the University of Saskatchewan, said Wednesday he agreed with a decision that a university employee, a self-admitted homosexual, be prevented from supervising practice teachers in city schools.

Dr. Begg told a news conference that the decision of Dean James Kirkpatrick of the university's college of education to keep Doug Wilson from the supervisory role was compatible with concepts of civil rights, human rights and discrimination.

Dr. Begg said the decision affecting Wilson, a 24-year-old education graduate student and professional lecturer at the university, was in no way discriminatory.

"There has been no discrimination against Mr. Wilson as a student or as a teacher within the university."

The issue arose last week when Wilson's department head was informed by Dean Kirkpatrick that Wilson would not be allowed to supervise the practice teachers outside the university.

The decision followed placement of an advertisement in the university's student newspaper in which Wilson solicited members for an academic gay association, giving a box number at the education building.

Gov't Ship to Carry Totems?

The provincial government's recently purchased vessel the Prince George may be used to transport 10 Haida totem poles back to their native location in the Queen Charlottes.

Highways Minister Graham Lea said Wednesday he has asked Resources Minister Bob Williams to use the vessel purchased from the CPR to take the poles back to the Queen Charlottes when the boat goes back into service next year.

The 10 totem poles, which have been stored in the Provincial Museum since as far back as 1963, are "very significant" to the Haida people, Lea said.

During the 1960s the city of Prince Rupert removed nine of the poles from deserted Haida villages and one pole was removed from the Queen Charlottes in 1901.

The poles were transferred to the provincial museum, Lea said, because there were no facilities for restoration of the poles at Prince Rupert.

There are now two museum facilities, one in Old Masset and another new complex is under construction in Skidegate Landing.

One problem the government faces, said Lea, is the transport of the poles. Neither museum has funds for transferring the Haida art.

Williams will look into the option of using the Prince George for delivery.

B.C. Rail Mediator Named

Glen Bowles of the United Transportation Union said Wednesday he has been informed that Jack Sherlock has been appointed industrial inquiry commissioner in the British Columbia Railway dispute.

Bowles said the report will be non-binding. Hugh Armstrong, B.C. Rail spokesman, said he has not been informed of Sherlock's appointment.

Government officials declined Wednesday to confirm the appointment.

Payment of overtime on a daily basis after eight hours of work is the major issue in the dispute which has resulted in about 20 per cent of the railway's work force of 700 being laid off.

Base rates in the dispute were not available.

JET DASH SOUGHT FOR EYE SWAPS

EDMONTON (CP) — A bid is being made here to establish an interprovincial eye exchange using jet aircraft to rush transplantable corneas to waiting recipients between Manitoba and British Columbia.

Peggy Thirlwell, supervisor of eye services for the Canadian National Institute for the blind's Alberta division, said today that similar to inter-state exchanges in the United States, the proposed Western Canada exchange would quickly match donated corneas with ready patients and doctors.

Mrs. Thirlwell said a letter proposing Lions Club sponsorship for the bank was sent to the club's regional executive Sept. 11. Although the club has yet to answer the request, she said, it has been active in promoting eye care.

Lars Sandahl, chairman of the Lions District 37 council of governors, said the proposal will be considered at the council meeting Jan. 22 and 23 in Missoula, Mont.

District 37 covers Montana and the Northwest Territories as well as Alberta, and Sandahl speculated all three areas might be considered for inclusion in the bank. No cost estimate was available.

Mrs. Thirwell estimated about half of the eyes now donated in Alberta are not transplanted, at least in part because a recipient and a medical team cannot be matched within the 48-hour time limit.

Consumers Praise Plumptre's Efforts

OTTAWA (CP) — The Consumers Association of Canada (CAC) in a letter to Prime Minister Trudeau Wednesday, urged the federal government to make a long-term commitment to the Food Prices Review Board and expand its responsibilities.

A spokesman in Trudeau's office said the letter had not been received and said they had no comment on whether the mandate, which expires the end of 1975, will be renewed.

"The Food Prices Review Board has clearly proven its value to consumers in Canada," the letter states. "Our association is confident that it could significantly improve its contribution in an expanded and more stable environment."

Signed by Maryon Brechin, past president of the CAC, the letter says the board should be expanded to "a consumer problems inquiry commission with an on-going mandate."

The CAC praised studies released by the board for being "comprehensive, unbiased and wide-ranging" and providing information "which could not otherwise have been available."

WANTED: WAY TO BEAT A SEX BIAS CHARGE

MONTGOMERY (UPI) — Alabama prison officials say that if something isn't done soon they will have to begin hiring women as guards in "the back halls" of the state's prisons for men. They're hoping someone will find a legal way to discriminate against the women who want the jobs.

"Ain't no way we can live with women guards in male prisons," said board of corrections member Tom Bradford Wednesday after the board was told that women were outscoring men on civil service tests for "correctional counsellor" and would have to be hired. Despite the title, counsellors work primarily as guards.

He Tried to Hide Nixon Donation

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Armand Hammer, the wealthy petroleum company executive and patron of the arts, admits he tried to hide the source of $54,000 he contributed to Richard Nixon's 1972 re-election campaign.

Hammer, who gave $100,000 to the campaign, pleaded guilty Wednesday to falsely claiming $54,000 of that amount was donated by other persons.

The chairman of the Occidental Petroleum Corp. board at one point balked at entering the plea when Judge William Jones suggested it might result in a prison sentence.

Former Montana Gov. Tim Babcock, Hammer's alleged go-between in making the contributions, is appealing a four-month term he received.

A criminal information filed by special Watergate prosecutor Henry Ruth charged Babcock, a former executive of the subsidiary Occidental International, passed the $54,000 to Nixon campaign finance chairman Maurice Stans. Babcock later joined Hammer in fabricating a coverup story about the source of the funds, the prosecutor said.

"The false story fell apart in June, 1974, when Babcock, who had been served with a grand jury subpoena, decided to testify truthfully," said Ruth.

Hess Celebrates

BERLIN (AP) — Rudolf Hess observed his ninth anniversary as the sole prisoner of the Spandau war crimes prison Tuesday. Hess, 81, former deputy fuehrer to Adolf Hitler, was described as healthy by a British spokesman. The British guarded Hess during September as part of the monthly rotation involving American, French, Soviet and British troops. The U.S., Britain and France have asked for the release of Hess, but the Soviet Union has refused to agree.

Abdunction Arrests

CLEVELAND (AP) — Two more men were arrested early today in connection with the abduction Monday of a General Motors executive and his family in Ann Arbor, Mich., FBI officials said. A third man had been arrested Wednesday.

A "subtantial" amount of money was recovered with the two men arrested today, according to the FBI.

Some of the ransom money was recovered before the capture of the two suspects today, said Wilburn DeBruler, special agent in charge of the FBI in Michigan.

The Ann Arbor News reported the amount recovered was $44,000.

Patty Linked to Heist Car

SAN FRANCISCO — Patricia Hearst has been identified as the woman who rented a garage for a getaway car used by bank robbers who killed a woman customer during a holdup, according to the Chronicle.

The report came after federal prosecutors said that the newspaper heiress and two Symbionese Liberation Army comrades may be charged with new, more-serious charges related to events after Hearst joined her kidnappers.

Asked Wednesday whether there is a possibility that Miss Hearst will be charged with murder, the U.S. attorney from Sacramento, Dwayne Keyes replied: "It's under investigation. If they find sufficient evidence, yes. If they don't, no."

At least three murders — and perhaps a fourth — are known to be under investigation in the Hearst-SLA case.

State attorney general Evelle Younger, however, said Hearst could conceivably escape prosecution if she agrees to take the witness stand against her former SLA comrades.

In a related development, the Chronicle also says investigators are looking into the "strong possibility" that the SLA actually carried out acts of terrorism claimed by a group called the "Chicano Liberation Front".

One investigator said two pipe bombs found in the home of SLA fugitives William and Emily Harris "can easily be compared" with dud pipe bombs planted by both the Chicano Liberation Front and another radical group the New World Liberation Front.

HIROHITO-FORD PLOT

Times News Services

ALBANY — Northern New York State authorities remain on the watch for three persons who left Montreal, they feel, bent on assassinating President Ford and Japanese Emperor Hirohito.

At least two of the three are said to be females.

Less than a month ago an alleged Japanese terrorist was deported from Canada after trying to enter the U.S. from Quebec. Yashamsa Gyoja, arrested Aug. 22 at Phillipsburg, Que., said he was a member of the Japantse Red Army.

In Washington, meanwhile, the chairman of a Senate committee investigating the United States Secret Service says the agency's decision that Sara Jane Moore was not a threat to Ford resulted from an error of human judgment.

The Secret Service agents responsible for the decision, Gary Yauger and Martin Haskell, say they would make the same one again.

"We knew she had no police record, no history of violent acts," Yauger said.

"She was involved in several organizations that led me to believe she was a non-violent type."

S. African Visit Topples W. German Chief

BONN (WP) — Gen. Guenther Rall, one of West Germany's top military officers, resigned Wednesday in the wake of a political storm that has developed here over a previously undisclosed visit by the general last year to atomic energy facilities in the white-ruled state of South Africa.

Though the Bonn government has repeatedly denied that the two governments are working together on any nuclear projects, the revelation that the general visited these facilities during a three-week tour of South Africa has caused the government here considerable diplomatic embarrassment among black African states.

Furthermore, the disclosures could also wind up hurting West Germany's civilian defence minister Georg Leber, and as a result the situation is being watched closely in Washington, specifically in the Pentagon.

Leber is a resolute supporter of a strong Western military alliance and hard-line stand against the Soviets. His views are closely allied to those of U.S. Defence Secretary James R. Schlesinger, who has become a big supporter of Leber in his post as civilian chief of Western Europe's most powerful army.

But Leber has been under attack recently on a variety of issues from left-wing elements of his own Social Democratic party and these most recent disclosures — which suggest Leber was aware of the trip — are being seen by some observers here as a further attempt to undermine the defence minister.

Leber has insisted publicly that he knew nothing of Gen. Rall's trip in October, 1974, until the previously secret visit was disclosed here by the German magazine Stern earlier this week.

A defence ministry spokesman said Wednesday that Leber, after finding out about the trip, recommended to German President Walter Scheel that Rall be removed from office.

Leber Wednesday accepted the resignation of the 57-year-old general who was a Luftwaffe flying ace during World War II, credited with shooting down 275 Allied planes.

CRAIG CLAIBORNE

We have long been bemused by a commentary attributed to the late great chef Auguste Escoffier: "However deservedly pork may be praised, it could never have been included among the preparations of first-class cookery (except subsidiarily) had it not been for the culinary value of hams."

While that may be the ultimate accolade for a cured leg of pig, the gentleman obviously does not share our intense enthusiasm for the remainder of the animal. We find pork in almost any of its myriad forms — from those delectable sausages made with pig's chitterlings to an irresistible roast loin — almost as appealing as caviar.

Two excellent pork dishes are printed here — one for pork chops stuffed with herbs, another for pork chops Esterhazy, a Hungarian-inspired dish made with sour cream and capers.

HERB STUFFED PORK CHOPS

4 loin, centre-cut pork chops, each about one inch thick and weighing about three-quarters of a pound
¼ cup peeled pistachios (optional)
¼ pound ground pork
¼ cup finely chopped onion
1 cup thinly sliced mushrooms
1 small clove garlic, peeled
3 tablespoons parsley
½ teaspoon dried marjoram or sage
¼ cup fine bread crumbs
1 raw chicken liver
Salt and freshly ground pepper
1 egg, beaten
Flour for dredging
1 tablespoon butter
1 cup chicken broth.

1. Preheat oven to 350 degrees.

2. Open the chops for stuffing "butterfly" fashion. To do this, use a sharp knife and slice the chops through the center down to the bone, top to bottom. Open them up, and using a flat mallet, pound the opened-up "flaps" to flatten lightly. Do not break the meat, however, in pounding.

3. Drop the pistachios into boiling water. Let stand a few seconds and drain. Rub off the skins. Set the pistachio meats aside.

4. Cook the ground pork in a saucepan, stirring, until it loses its red color. Add the onion and mushrooms and cook, stirring.

5. Chop the garlic with the parsley and marjoram and add them to the pork mixture. Stir in the bread crumbs.

6. Chop the chicken liver and add it, stirring. Add salt and pepper to taste and the pistachios. Cook briefly and remove from the heat. Let cool. Add the egg and blend well.

7. Sprinkle the opened-up chops with salt and pepper to taste. Add equal amounts of the filling to the chops and bring the flaps together to enclose the stuffing. Skewer the ends of each chop with toothpicks or sew with string.

8. Dredge the chops on all sides in flour seasoned with salt and pepper.

9. Heat the butter in a large, heavy skillet and brown the chops well on one side, five minutes or longer. Turn and brown on the other side. Cover loosely with aluminum foil.

10. Place the skillet in the oven and bake one hour. Remove the chops briefly and add half the chicken broth to the skillet, stirring it into the brown particles on the bottom of the skillet. Return the chops to the skillet. Cover with foil and bake 15 minutes longer. Turn the chops in the pan glaze; then transfer them to a hot serving dish. Add the remaining broth to the skillet and cook, stirring, to dissolve the brown particles remaining. Strain this over the chops.

Yield: Four servings.

PORK CHOPS ESTERHAZY

8 thick loin pork chops, about half a pound each
Salt and freshly ground pepper
2 tablespoons peanut, vegetable or corn oil
½ cup chopped carrots
½ cup chopped celery
1 cup chopped onions
2 tablespoons finely minced garlic
½ teaspoon thyme
1 bay leaf
6 sprigs fresh parsley
½ cup dry white wine
1 cup chicken broth
1 tablespoon tomato paste
1 tablespoon imported mustard such as Dijon or Dusseldorf
1 cup sour cream
¼ cup drained capers.

1. Sprinkle the chops with salt and pepper to taste. Heat the oil in a large skillet and add the chops. Brown on both sides, about 10 minutes each side. Pour off the fat.

2. Scatter the carrots, celery, onion, garlic, thyme, bay leaf and parsley around the chops. Cover and cook 10 minutes. Add the wine and the chicken broth blended with tomato paste. Cook 45 minutes and turn the chops. Continue cooking about 45 minutes or until the chops are quite tender.

3. Remove the chops and keep them warm. Add the mustard and sour cream and stir. Bring just to the boil, but do not boil or the sour cream will curdle. Put the sauce through a fine sieve, pressing down with a wooden spoon to extract the liquid flavorings from the vegetables. Add this to a small saucepan and stir in the capers. Add salt to taste and reheat gently without boiling. Spoon this over the chops and heat gently without boiling. Serve hot.

Yield: Eight servings.

BAKED GLAZED CHICKEN

By MARY MOORE

The ideal opportunity came to make a twelve-serving chicken dish. We were at Eagle Lake in Haliburton and guests were coming for supper from a neighboring lake. In all there were five adults and eight children all of whom had been playing on the raft in the water and were hungry.

My daughter-in-law Margaret had two chickens in the freezer which we thawed and cut up. They weighed over six pounds. We agreed later that this dish might have been better if we had used the same weight in chicken parts.

BAKED GLAZED CHICKEN
(serves 8 to 10 or 5 adults and 8 children)

6 or 7 lbs. cut up chicken or chicken parts.
one 8-oz. jar apricot jam.
one foil pkg. onion soup mix.
one 8-oz. bottle red french dressing.
½ c. water.

You must use a large roasting pan in which to arrange the chicken pieces. Try to crowd them so you will have only one layer.

Mix together the apricot jam, onion soup mix, French dressing and water. Pour this evenly over the chicken. Now turn each piece over. Bake at 325 deg. Fahr. 1½ hours. (The chicken does not require turning again.)

NOTE: Margaret and I talked about this dish and she said "Mum, that recipe could be doubled and you could suggest to your readers who are conveners of church and club suppers that it is very simple to assemble."

So planners off large parties — please clip this recipe for Glazed Chicken and double or triple it according to the number you expect.

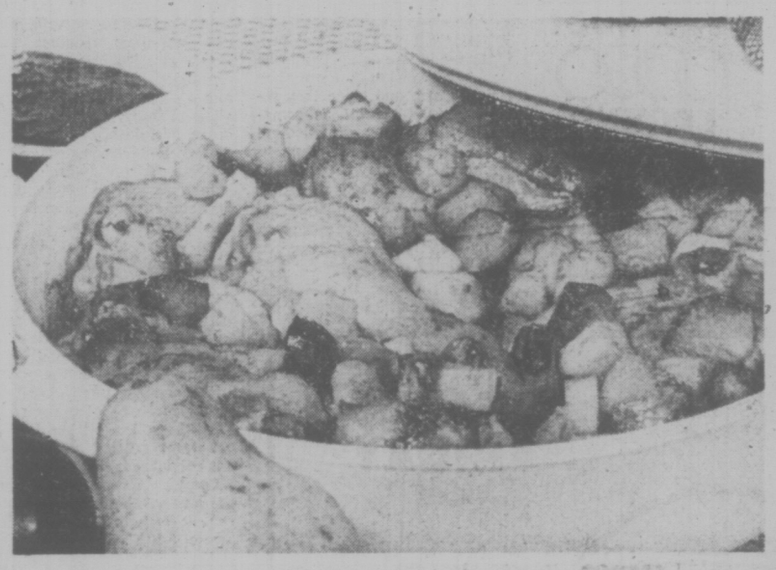
Chicken: Universal Favorite



Chicken is a universal favorite. Because of its delicate flavor it lends itself to combination with many other foods such as fruits and vegetables. It is also a great favorite for casseroles.

Chicken compares favorably with other meats as a source of high quality protein, niacin and iron. It has the advantage of containing less fat than most meats, especially when the skin and outer fat are removed.

Ready-to-cook chicken may be purchased whole or cut up. When you buy, compare the price of whole chickens to that of chicken parts. If whole chickens are lower in price per pound, buy these and cut them yourself. All you need is a sharp knife.

To remove wing: Pull the wing out from the body and slash the skin between them. Cut around the shoulder joint to separate the wing from the breast, leaving as much white meat on the breast as possible. If desired, cut off the wing tips.

To remove leg (drumstick and thigh): Slash the skin between the body and the thigh; then press down and out on the leg until the hip joint pushes out of its socket. Cut through the hip joint, separating the thigh from the body of the bird. If desired, cut the drumstick away from the thigh through the knee joint.

To remove the neck and backbone: Starting at the tail, cut through the ribs slightly to the right of the backbone all the way to the neck. Repeat on the left side of the backbone. Remove the backbone and neck in one piece by cutting the skin around the neck.

To separate breast from back: Insert the knife in wing socket and cut through the rib joints to the back of the bird. This separates the back from the breast, leaving part of the ribs on each.

To divide breast: Spread the bird open and cut the pearl-like cartilage on either side of the keel bone in the neck region. Hold the bird firmly and press from underneath, forcing the keel bone to springup so that it can be easily removed. Cut the breast in half lengthwise.

Chicken parts can be used in many ways, the favorite being in casseroles. For special fall eating, pair them with peaches, pears and plums. "Curied Fruit Chicken" is a dish suitable for company. Serve it with rice and condiments for an Indian-style dinner.

CURRIED FRUIT CHICKEN

1 cut-up chicken broiler (about 4 pounds)
¼ cup fat
½ cup brown sugar
1 tablespoon curry powder
1 tablespoon flour
¼ cup melted fat
2 peaches peeled, pitted and cubed
2 pears peeled, cored and cubed
2 plums, pitted and cubed.

Brown chicken in ¼ cup fat. Arrange chicken skin side up in baking dish. Combine sugar, curry powder, flour and ¼ cup melted fat. Stir into fruit. Let stand 15 minutes, mixing occasionally. Spread fruit over chicken. Cover and bake 30 minutes at 350 degrees F. Uncover and continue baking until chicken is tender (about 50 minutes more). Six servings.

Caution on Liquid Meal Supplements

Q:
Do the liquid meals on the market have all the nutrients that are in the meals they replace.

A:
We have compared a diet formula common on the market with an average dinner, consisting of 3 oz. lean beef, 1 vegetable, 1 slice of bread, glass of milk and 1 serving of fresh fruit. These are the nutrient breakdowns:

	Calories	Protein	Calcium	Iron
Liquid meal	225	17.5 gm.	500 mg.	2.5 mg.
Meal	358	37.5 gm.	366 mg.	4.3 mg.
	Thiamine	Riboflavin	Niacin	Vit. C
Meal	.27 mg.	.76 mg.	8.6 mg.	13.5 mg.
Liquid meal	.5 mg.	.75 mg.	3.8 mg.	17.5 mg.

Note that the protein and niacin levels of the liquid meal are about half that of the regular meal. An adult man requires 3 times that amount of protein per day, while a woman needs more than twice that amount. These meal supplements should not be used on a regular basis. It is much less expensive to home prepare frozen foods to meet your special requirements.

Q:
My baby is getting chubbier than others his age. Is there a chance that he might be getting "fat"—should something be done?

A:
If you tend to overfeed your baby in the first year there is a chance that your child will be predisposed to obesity later. During this time there can be a rapid multiplication of fat cells if the infant is overfed. To prevent this from occurring be aware of signs of feeding resistance, then stop offering food. His diet should be adequate, but not excessive in water, calories and all essential nutrients.

Q:
Is fasting good for your health?

A:
Sustained fasting (over two days) may be damaging to physical health. Carbohydrate stored in the body, which normally supply energy, lasts only about three hours after food intake. If these are not replenished, the body fat and protein is used to supply the energy for basal functions. If body protein is continually taken for energy, vital growth and rebuilding functions cease and essential processes break down.

Storage Area For Vegetables Easily Built

Many families have a surplus of vegetables from their garden in the fall, others may wish to buy produce in bulk from local growers or roadside stands when prices are lowest.

Keeping these vegetables sometimes presents a problem as the basements of most homes are much too warm and dry for successful storage. However, an inexpensive storage room can be built in one corner of a basement, under a porch, front steps, or bay window, or in part of a utility room.

Before building a storage area, consider the conditions required by each commodity you wish to store; some items such as root vegetables need cool, moist conditions whereas others such as pumpkin and squash need a warm, dry atmosphere. Still others, like onions or dried beans, require cool dry conditions.

When several kinds of fruits and vegetables are stored in one room, you cannot provide ideal conditions for each one, but you can try to work out the best conditions possible.

Cool, moist conditions (0 C; 90-95% reletive humidity) are required for most late-harvested vegetables such as beets, cabbages, carrots, celery, parsnips, potatoes and rutabagas. Select round, well-developed, mature vegetables and discard any showing signs of injury or decay. Root crops should be reasonably dry when placed in storage.

Beets, carrots, parsnips and rutabagas lose moisture readily and tend to shrink in storage. Keep them in perforated polyethylene bags to help retain moisture and color.

Keep cabbages in the dark or use black polyethylene bags to reduce moisture loss.

Celery can be stored if you lift the plants with the roots intact and set them close together in boxes of moist soil. Keep the soil moist but do not get water on the top because this encourages decay.

Potatoes for regular home use are of better quality if you store them at a temperature of 5-10 C. Potatoes stored at lower temperatures tend to become sweet.

Vegetables requiring warm, dry conditions: (10-15 C; 85-90 per cent relative humidity.)

Store green, pink or ripe tomatoes in a dry basement. Place them in shallow trays, preferably one layer deep. Green tomatoes can be kept for two to six weeks. Inspect them at regular intervals to remove ripe fruit and discard any that are rotting. Green tomatoes should be kept at 13 C or above for satisfactory ripening, but ripe tomatoes can be stored at temperatures just above freezing for one to two weeks.

Store pumpkin and winter squash one shelves in a heated basement, placing them so that they do not touch one another. They should have been handled carefully and should be well matured and free from injury and decay. Cure them for about 2 weeks in a dry location at 27-30 C before setting them in storage.

Vegetables requiring a cool, dry location (0 C; 50-60 per cent relative humidity)

Dried beans, peas or popcorn can be kept in an attic, outside porch, or unheated room, but store them in polyethylene bags without holes or in glass jars to keep them dry.

Onions need to be cured for several weeks in a warm, dry well-ventilated location. Let them dry until the skins rustle. If they are mature and dried, they will keep for several months in an attic or unused room where the temperature does not drop below freezing.

Because some of the shelf life of fruits and vegetables is used up even in cold storage, they do not keep as long after removal from storage as does freshly harvested produce. Extremely perishable fruits and vegetables have a short storage life, so use them within a few days.

Frequenly, moisture condenses on the surface of produce when it is removed from cold storage. This is known as sweating, and it should be prevented whenever possible because it encourages decay to set in. You can avoid it to some extent if you allow the produce to warm up gradually in a dry location when you remove it from storage.

For more information on the construction and operation of a cold storage room, write for your free copy of "Home Storage Room for Fruits and Vegetables". This publication is available at Agriculture Canada, Information Division, Ottawa, K1A 0C7.

Vegetarian Vegetable Soup

¼ c. pot barley
½ c. dry lima beans
8 c. water
1 c. raw macaroni alphabets or broken noodles
1 c. finely chopped celery (1 large outside stalk)
1 c. diced (¼") carrots
1 c. chopped and peeled tomatoes (or canned)
1 medium onion chopped fine
½ c. chopped parsley (packed — including stems)
½ to ¾ tsp. M.S.G. (accent)
2½ tasp. salt
⅛ to ¼ tsp. pepper
1 c. milk
3 tbsp. corn starch

Two hours before mealtime put on to cook in the water and barley and limas and let cook 1 hour then add all remaining ingredients EXCEPT milk and cornstarch and cook 1 hour longer. At mealtime stir the cornstarch into the milk to a smooth paste. Stir into soup until thick and boiling again. It is now ready to serve.

As you can see all the valuable vegetable minerals are conserved.

DEAR ABBY: With all the important problems you get, mine will probably sound like nothing, but I sure need some advice.

I am married to a stubborn, hot-tempered man who has a terrible foot odor. His feet perspire, and he won't change his shoes and socks or bathe his feet when he comes home. He leaves his shoes on right up until it's time to go to bed, then he takes them off and leaves them in the bedroom. This smells up the whole bedroom like you wouldn't believe. It sure repels me from any romantic ideas I might have.

I have bought him foot deodorant and anti-fungicide sprays, which he used a few times reluctantly, but it didn't help much.

I can't sleep anywhere else because I have a bad back and have to sleep on an extra firm mattress that is in the bedroom we share. What do I do now?—ASPHYXIATED IN SAN CARLOS

DEAR AS: Move the extra firm mattress to another room and pleasant dreams.

DEAR ABBY: Why are people ashamed to admit that they watch television?

I have friends who say, "I NEVER watch television, but I just happened to catch 'All In The Family' last Monday evening, and . . ."

That kind of snobbery irks me to no end. What's with these phonies, anyway?—ENJOYS TV

DEAR ENJOYS: Most people would like to appear to be more intellectual than they really are, and since they regard watching TV as something less than an intellectual pursuit, they're reluctant to admit that they're constant viewers.

It's the same kind of insecurity that causes people to say they read the book when they only saw the movie.

Pick-a-Surname Not So Far Out

elizabeth forbes

The 11th report of the Berger Commission on Family Law, released a couple of weeks ago, includes a recommendation that a man and a woman should be able to take any surnames they wish when they get married.

Five options in this connection are proposed: both take the man's surname, both take the woman's surname; each take their birth name; each take their legal name at time of marriage or finally, they apply jointly for an entirely new marriage surname, including a hyphenated surname, if they wish.

All very neat and tidy in the summing up, even if a little far out. And I'm sure hundreds (perhaps thousands) of women have looked at the press stories on that recommendation, nodded their heads and then agreed that it is a "definite step forward."

Yet, in spite of what they may think, right now a woman does not have to take her husband's name when they marry.

She can go on being Suzie Jones while living in legal bliss with Bill, John or Jim Smith.

If you have a copy of the report of the Royal Commission on the Status of Women in Canada on your book shelves, get it out and turn to pages 234-5, in the chapter women and the family.

On those pages you will see this sentencce. "There is no law which requires a woman to adopt her husband's name upon marriaage."

You will also read that "it is the custom in Canada, as in many other western countries, for a married woman to adopt her husband's name," also that many briefs received by that royal commission contained objections to the practice on the grounds that it constituted a hardship and deprived a married woman of her individual identity.

"The fact a woman at marriage loses her name and assumes that of her husband is an example of a custom that is to a greater or lesser degree harmful to a woman's self-development," those pages tell us.

The change of name upon marriage, it is suggested, "may create a source of some confusion, especially for women in business and the professions, where it is important to maintain a continuity of name."

Some time after the status of women report came out, Jean Sharp of Canadian Press picked up that bit about Canadian women who wished to keep their maiden names because they considered them an important part of their own personalities.

In her story she presented as an excellent example, Elsie Gregory MacGill of Toronto, a highly successful aeronautical engineer, married to E. J. Soulsby, a business executive in an aircraft firm since 1943, and who uses her maiden name at all times — in business and socially.

Miss MacGill pointed out that the custom of taking the husband's name after marriage is anything but universal.

In some cultures, she said, girls carry their mother's name and while that is not often done, it is an old idea.

The status of women commission assertion that it is only a custom to change names is based on the fact there is no law in Canada that says a woman must change her name.

However, the report adds that "while the law does not precisely state that a married woman's legal name is her husband's, this well-established practice is tacitly implied in some legislation and administrative practices."

Some confusion can arise, too, because provincial change-of-name acts say a married woman may not change her name without her husband's consent — although that is only in the case of women who have adopted their husband's names.

Adding somewhat to the confusion has been the fact that a woman who uses — and is known by — her maiden name, must indicate her married status on her passport, though she could carry the passport in the name by which she was known.

An argument Miss MacGill presented was that retaining a maiden name can actually save a lot of confusion because of continuity.

Suzie Jones, as she puts it, does not suddenly disappear for people who don't know whom she married.

And "if the bliss ceases and a divorce takes place, she doesn't have to carry a name she may not want."

All of which could lead a person to believe the recommendation presented in the 11th report of the Berger Commission on Family Law, may not be as far out as it may appear on first reading.

TRUST FUND SET

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian branch of the Royal Air Forces Escaping Society is starting a campaign next week to establish $100,000 trust fund for peole who helped Canadian airmen escape captivity or evade capture during the Second World War.

Society president Don McLarty said Wednesday the society will appeal to corporations and the public for contributions to the fund. The interest will be used to help support those who are ill and to sponsor visits to Canada for about six couples a year.

About 60 members of the society, which was formed in Toronto in 1964, are to meet here Friday to honor their helpers.

PUMPERNICKEL

3 Loaves of Real Thing

PUMPERNICKEL
(3 loaves of the real thing)

- 2 pkgs. granular yeast
- 1 c. lukewarm water (first amount)
- 2 tsp. sugar
- 3¼ c. luekwarm water (second amount)
- 2 squares unsweetened chocolate, melted
- ¼ c. molasses
- 1 tbsp. margarine
- 2 c. unseasoned hot mashed potatoes (about 4-see below)
- ¾ c. corn meal
- 2 tbsp. salt
- 2 tbsp. caraway seeds (optional)
- 3 c. unsifted rye flour (usually dark)
- 1 c. whole bran cereal or all bran, about 9¾ c. unsifted white flour—all-purpose

Scrub and trim blemishes from four medium-sized potatoes; boil covered in water to cover until tender. Drain, peel and mash until there are no lumps. Measure two cups.

In a very large mixing bowl or clean dishpan soak the yeast and sugar in the one cup lukewarm water for 10 minutes.

Meanwhile heat together in large pan until lukewarm the 3¼ cups lukewarm water, melted chocolate, molasses and margarine. Remove from heat and mix in mashed potatoes, corn meal, salt and caraway seeds. Mix well and stir into risen yeast liquid. Add the rye flour and bran and beat for 5 minutes. Add 3 cups white flour and beat until you have a soft dough—at least 5 minutes. Now add 4 more cups white flour, mixing in well, scrape down sides of bowl, cover and let rise at least 1 hour. Sprinkle kneading board with 1 cup of left-over flour. Turn dough out on it. Sprinkle top with ½ cup of remaining flour and begin kneading surplus flour into dough until it is not sticky. Flour your hands with the remaining measured flour liberally to make kneading possible. As soon as it will hold its shape (you will need al of this flour) and is uniformly kneaded, shape into roll, cut in three pieces. Shape them into small footballs and place in buttered standard loaf pans. Let rise under light 1 hour or until risen 1" above rims of pans. Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. about 55 to 66 minutes or until when rapped with knuckles it sounds hollow. Do not underbake. Switch and turn pans in oven at halftime. Carefully turn out on racks to cool.

Apple —Sausage Breakfast

- 1 pound bulk sausage, cut into ½-inch slices
- 2 Red Delicious apples, cored and cut into ¼-inch rings

Place sausage slices and apple rings on the bottom of a large skillet. (It may be necessary to use 2 skillets or make 2 batches.) Cook over medium heat, turning occasionally, for about 20 minutes, until sausage is well browned and apples are tender. Serve with eggs, pancakes or French toast.

Makes eight servings.

Percolating Coffee Prices Lead Canadian Grocery Costs Higher

By The Canadian Press

The price of coffee increased in September for the second time in eight weeks, a Cross-Canada Survey by The Canadian Press shows.

A mid-July frost that wiped out half of Brazil's coffee crop caused Canadian coffee prices to rise in that period by 35 cents a pound. Of 12 cities surveyed, eight reflected the price increase.

George Beatty of General Foods Ltd., Canada's largest coffee processor, said further increases are not expected in the immediate future, "but it depends on world markets."

In Vancouver; coffee increased 10 cents a pound to $1.39. To other food prices, chicken was up 10 cents a poun dat $1.09, but sirloin roast dropped 10 cents to $2.29.

Pork decreased 26 cents to $2.29 and chuck 20 cents to 89 cents. Butter was up one cent to $1.16.

Bread was down seven cents at 49 cents. Tomatoes increased 10 cents to 59 cents.

Apples dipped 24 cents to 35 cents. Pears, however, rose three cents to 73 cents. A total food basket containing 13 items cost was $16.05. The cost in August for the same number of items was $14.44, a difference of $1.61.

Total for September, 1974, however, was $17.80.

No figures are given for Victoria but prices here are at a level with or higher than mainland ones.

In Regina and Edmonton, prices on a 10-pound sack of potatoes rose 20 cents to $1.19. In Winnipeg the price was up 19 cents to 88 cents and in Vancouver the increase was 14 cents to $1.09.

Last year, prices decreased following exceptionally large potato crops in both Canada and the United States. This year, growers in both countries responded by reducing acreage.

In Toronto; pork dipped 51 cents to $1.78 and sirloin roast by 13 cents to $1.85.

Wieners rose 10 cents to 98 cents and chicken eight cents to $1.04.

Chuck was up six cents to $1.04 and codfish 14 cents to $1.39.

Butter increased three cents to $1.12 and bread 15 cents to 57 cents. Potatoes dropped 10 cents to 99 cents, but tomatoes jumped 20 cents to 69 cents.

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

Generally speaking, when declarer has a loser in his own hand which he can trump in dummy, he does so. But situations arise where this straightforward play is a losing one. This point is demonstrated in today's deal, which came up during the 1975 National Championships held in Miami Beach this past summer. Sitting South was Rita Seamon. North was her husband Billy.

Neither side vulnerable. North deals.

NORTH
♥ A 9 4
♦ Q 7 5

WEST
♠ K 9 7
♥ J 10 6
♦ J 10 9 3
♣ 10 9 4

EAST
♠ J 10 8 4
♥ K 8 7 5 3 2

SOUTH
♠ Q 6 3
♥ Q
♣ A K Q 7 3

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
Pass	Pass	1 ♣	Pass
2 NT	Pass	3 ♦	Pass
4 ♥	Pass	4 NT	Pass
5 ♥	Pass	6 ♣	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Jack of ♥.

North's jump to two no-trump was a "stretch" of one point (as a passed hand, he promised 12 points). From South's position, slam prospects looked bright, especially since North, for his bid, rated to have the diamond queen. When North subsequently showed that he had club support, the Blackwood Slam Convention was employed to make sure that the opposition did not possess the two outstanding aces.

The opening heart lead was won by dummy's ace, after which a heart was trumped in the closed hand. A diamond was then led to dummy's queen, and this was followed by the trumping of the board's remaining heart. Next came the ace, king, and queen of trumps, gathering in the adversely held pieces.

Declarer now cashed the ace and king of diamonds, hoping that the six outstanding diamonds were divided 3-3 originally. Had they been so divided, declarer's fourth diamond would become the only one remaining in the deck. On it she could discard the board's two of spades, and her only loser would then be a spade trick.

But when she cashed her two top diamonds, East discarded a heart, revealing that West still retained the high jack of diamonds. South now led her remaining diamond, and West played the jack. Declarer, however, did not trump. Instead she discarded the board's deuce of spades, allowing West's diamond jack to win the trick.

Having nothing remaining in his hand except three spades. West was forced to lead this suit. When he led the seven-spot, the five was played from dummy, and South's queen became her slam going trick.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By SYDNEY OMARR

Astrological Forecast
Friday, October 3, 1975

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You see way out of situation which had been sapping time, energy and money. You can actually rid yourself of burden. Accent is on employment, mutual interests involving basic issues.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Good lunar position indicates exciting changes, more creative activity, unique involvement. Member of opposite sex is likely to be in picture. New start in new direction could be on agenda. Leo, Aquarius figure prominently.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Follow through on hunch. Teach and learn. Accent is on finalizing transaction. Property could be involved. Get appraisal. Learn from recent experience. Aquarian could be in picture. Rise above petty jealousies.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Accent on movement, meetings, calls, messages and an "abundance" of visits, visitors, close neighbors and relatives. Gemini, Sagittarius and other restless folks are featured. You'll go places, do things and might want to catch a "second wind."

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Accent on what you can collect, how to protect your interests. Key is to read between the lines and to be aware of fine print. Aquarius, Taurus and Scorpio figure prominently. Count your change. Don't take back seat.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Favorable changes occur — you also learn the "why" of recent events. Take initiative. Give full play to intellectual curiosity. Your questions receive serious consideration and you'll get informative answers.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Soothing talk is fine, but you should persist in efforts to determine costs, potential, time required and energy to be expended. If this you do — in reasonable fashion — you'll profit and avoid future embarrassment. Taurus could play important role.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Accent on evaluating needs as opposed to desires. See beyond the immediate. Strive to become familiar with realities of potential. Pisces, Virgo individuals may be in picture. Romantic auro is present. Enjoy yourself but don't take "sweet nothing whispers" too seriously.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Added pressures, responsibilities are indicated. Accent on career, basic ambitions, standing in community. Sales organization meeting is featured. Get priorities in order. You are asked to "produce." Be ready — have factual information available.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Long-range projects continue to dominate. Strive to "get a line" on what appears to be a subtle hint. Aries, Libra persons could be in picture. Language barrier can be overcome. Study and travel are likely to be featured.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Involvement is shown — nothing is tepid or halfway. It is all or nothing — and you are called upon to make a commitment. Get to heart of matters. Determine who is a spokesman or representative — and present your case.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Lie low; play waiting game. Accent is on what you sign, agree to, how you convince those who hold opposing views. You get intuitive flash which can be transformed into profit. Follow hunch. Trust your feelings.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you can make people laugh because you also enjoy laughter. You are artistic, versatile and fond of eating foods which contain an abundance of calories. Gemini, Sagittarius persons play important roles in your life. This is a power year for you — you get new, profitable opportunity in November.

Clay Not Necessarily Nightmare

To many home gardeners clay soil is a nightmare. Taking the advice of well-meaning friends and neighbors they add sand or sawdust and discover their problems have multiplied.

The base of all soils is disintegrated rock. The rock which results in clay breaks down to a very fine powder, like talcum, which easily becomes compacted and sticky.

The first rule is never to work, or walk over, a clay soil when it is wet. To do so causes compaction which results in severe baking as soon as the water content drains away, leaving the tilled area in lumps resembling concrete. In this condition it takes another winter of saturating rains to loosen the particles.

That is the reason we always work a clay soil in fall when it is reasonably dry, and the best tool to use is the four or five tined digging fork which loosens and breaks the soil rather than turning it in blocks.

For better drainage and earlier working in the spring, the soil should be left in ridges over winter.

There are several ways of ridging soil, the easiest is to dig one strip in the usual way leaving it level, and to throw the soil from the next strip on top to make a ridge. When this is repeated we have a ridge and a trench for each two strips.

We read in gardening books that ridging "exposes a greater surface of soil to the beneficial effects of frost and rain," the theory being that the expansion of frozen water in a saturated clay will break it down into fine particles.

Locally this does not work in practice because our soils never never "freeze" more than an inch deep, leaving a film of fine particles which is soon again compacted by the pounding raindrops.

Gardeners should never underestimate the damage done to a clay soil in prolonged periods of rain. A lot of the improvement from a cover crop over winter is due to the protection it provides against rain.

Ridged soil suffers less than level soil, and the ridges drain more easily into the trenches, making it possible to work the soil (break down the ridges) some four weeks earlier in spring.

Everybody, excepting those who have tried it, recommends the addition of sand, not knowing that when a sand-clay mixture dries out in summer it is almost impossible to force a spade more than two inches deep because the sand grains are not free to move out of the path of the spade.

When sawdust is added, the chips of wood retain moisture many weeks longer than the clay itself, making the soil unfit for working until end of May into mid-June.

Since clay tends to hold water rather than allowing free drainage, it does not lose its fertility as easily as a well drained soil, therefore is one of the best soils a gardener could wish to have. The only thing it lacks is humus.

When sufficient humus, in the form of composted plant wastes and really old horse or cow manure, is added to a stiff clay it becomes a clay-loam which is a rich garden soil, and is capable of holding moisture in areas of low summer rainfall. Because it does not dry out like sand it requires far less watering to maintain good plant growth.

Humus, spread over a clay plot about six inches deep in the fall, will protect the soil from damage by winter rains, and the covering can be tilled-in around late May. This can be done to advantage every fall on a vegetable patch where cropping is heavy and the humus quickly used by the plants. In five years the soil becomes a pleasure to own, although not workable quite as early as ridged soil.

Once the gardener is willing to accept the fact that clay is not a soil that can be worked early in spring, and has the patience to wait until it dries naturally before attempting to sow or plant, he no longer has a nightmare.

HELP! THE HAND YOU SEE before you belongs to a male caucasian who is sinking into the bottomless depths of Victoria's singlebar scene. I would like to meet an intelligent, tall 25-30 year old lady who would spend sometime with me in environs other than those inhabited by the vacant-eyed and emotionally undernourished. One or two young children no liability, but no estranged wives, please. Photo appreciated. Victoria Press Box 651.

TWO COUPLES TO MEET other couples 20-35 who are interested in swinging and have good communications in their own partnership. Strict confidence and discretion assured and expected. Couples only, no singles. Victoria Press, Box 641.

Demerits Defended

The demerit point system is an adequate deterrent against speeding drivers and the motor vehicles branch is not considering a return to issuing fines for drivers caught outpacing the speed limits.

Motor Vehicles Superintendent R. G. Whitlock said Tuesday that if police forces in B.C. are running up against more speeders, the increase might be attributed to lower speed limits. Enforcement of laws, not a return to fines, is the answer he said.

The superintendent was commenting on opinions voiced by local police forces that drivers are "just laughing" at the demerit point system and some motorists have as many as 40 demerit points when they are stopped by police cruisers.

Whitlock explained that a drivers' record is not wiped clean after a suspension. The points still remain. He suggested police are referring to drivers whose licences have already been suspended and returned, and added that the first speeding infraction recorded at the branch after a suspension, usually warrants another suspension.

A driver who gets more than 20 points — at three points per speeding infraction — loses his licence. A total 20 points costs the driver $400 for a drivers' certificate.

Fire, Strike Force Post To Suspend Publication

WASHINGTON — Executives of The Washington Post, crippled by a pressmen's walkout and pressroom damage caused by a fire they say was planned, temporarily have suspended publication of the paper.

The foreman of the pressroom, James Hover, 42, was beaten when he tried to put out the fire, authorities said.

Officials of the pressmen's union said bargaining over controversial work practices broke down, leading to the strike Wednesday.

Pickets were marching in front of the entrances to The Post building and there were reports of scattered violence.

Police reported at least 25 arrests and "a lot of minor injuries, like nosebleeds."

Some editorial employees were in their offices late Wednesday, and a police spokesman said some persons spent the night in the building.

Other employees reported that they left in groups for added protection.

Police said those arrested were charged with disorderly conduct.

One Post editorial employee, Kathy Sawyer, said she was struck by a piece of wood as she left the building Wednesday night.

She was treated for minor injuries at a local hospital.

Members of the Newspaper Guild, which represents editorial workers at The Post, voted overwhelmingly to remain on the job. Editorial workers leaving the building after the vote said they were the object of "shouting, cursing and spitting."

The pressmen walked out early Wednesday after negotiations between the union and the company broke off with no settlement Tuesday night. Their contract expired at midnight Tuesday night.

The walkout halted the printing of the last 50,000 of the newspaper's regular 550,000 daily press run for Wednesday.

As the pressmen walked off their jobs, the fire erupted in The Post pressroom and a company spokesman said there was evidence of "sabotage."

Objects were thrown into machinery, windows were smashed and electrical wiring ripped out, he added.

Fire officials said the blaze in the pressroom was brought under control within 10 minutes. A Post spokesman said there was damage to all nine of the newspaper's presses.

Post negotiators said the dispute was the result of efforts to reduce overtime work and to rewrite contract clauses specifying the number of men who must work each shift. The Post also has sought to overhaul grievance procedures.

Union spokesmen said negotiations had not begun on key contract demands such as wages and hours.

The Post said starting pressmen earn $14,589 a year with an average salary $22,568 and the maximum $34,649. Neither side would say how much the pressmen have asked in salary increases.

Protest Over Transfer

REGINA (CP) — Patrol Sgt. Rolly Stoneham, the city policeman who recently advocated Indian-staffed courts as one means of averting possible racial tension here, has been transferred to the traffic division from his position as community relations officer.

Police Chief Al Hugert said Wednesday that he objected to Stoneham's public statements, particularly one that appeared to blame the chief for racial confrontation.

Hugert said he could not let such open dissension continue without some type of action and that was the main reason for the transfer.

Stoneham, a 20-year veteran of the force, declined comment on the issue.

Huget objected to reported comments by Stoneham concerning a proposal 30 months ago to lower force-entry requirements for Indian applicants and said the proposal should not have been raised through internal police force channels.

"When he comes out with very radical ideas, he should have the time to discuss them with the department first."

Meanwhile, a group representing more than 25 Indian and other organizations expressed concern over the transer.

The group voted unanimously to send a letter asking why the transfer took place.

POSTAL RATE HIKES 165%?

By JEFF CARRUTHERS
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Second class postal rates to the United States covering newspapers and periodicals will jump 165 per cent or more, depending on weight, starting Jan. 1, 1976, with the prospect for another 20 per cent or more postal increase in 1977.

In a related move, the post office is also preparing a 60 per cent hike in third class postal rates for books sent to the U.S., starting in January, with another 20 to 30 per cent increase scheduled for 1967.

In both instances, Canadian publishers mailing material to the United States will be losing a long-time preferential rate treatment and will instead begin paying international rates.

But the post office is quick to point out that the higher postal rates also apply to American newspapers and periodicals and books coming into Canada — in fact the international rates across the border have been in effect since last year, under a Canada-U.S. postal agreement reached in 1971.

A post office official said that on balance, Canada's publishing industry should gain more from the indirect protection from the previously subsidized invasion of U.S. publications than it stands to lose from the higher postal rates it must pay to ship a much lower volume of material to the United States.

The official noted that companies publishing romance novels in southern Ontario, for mass marketing in the U.S. and Canada, might be hit hardest.

Beirut Kidnap Wave

BEIRUT (TNS) — Security forces have been ordered to crack down on a wave of kidnappings in Lebanon no matter what bloodshed may result, Interior Minister Camille Chamoun said today.

Chamoun made his tough statement amid reports that more than 100 people were kidnapped Wednesday in the factional violence gripping this city.

The kidnapping raised fears of renewed fighting despite a ceasefire that was supposed to take effect last week.

Sniper bullets as well as the kidnappings emptied the streets of Beirut today, bringing calls for the resignation of president Suleiman Franjieh.

The casualty toll from two weeks of Christian-Moslem fighting in the capital rose to 347 dead and 600 wounded. About 3,700 persons have been killed or wounded in religious warfare since April.

DRURY BEGINS JAPAN VISIT

NIIGATA, Japan (Reuter) — Charles Drury, Canadian science and technology minister, flew here from Moscow today to begin a five-day visit to Japan.

He later left by train for Tokyo where he will meet three Japanese cabinet ministers and leaders of the Federation of Economic Organizations on Friday.

After visiting Kyoto, western Japan, and the space centre in Tanegashima, southern Japan, Drury will leave for Hong Kong next Tuesday.

Common Front On North Woes

Canadian Press

The British Columbia government is studying the feasibility of forming a committee to provide a liason with Alaska and the Yukon Territory.

Alf Nunweiler, minister without portfolio in charge of northern affairs, said Wednesday the needs of the people in northern B.C. and the two other areas are similar and such a committee would be responsible for solving common problems.

"We all have problems delivering community services to remote areas and we would like to see improved transportation and communication systems in the north," the minister said.

Child Protection

QUEBEC (CP) — A provincial law will come into effect Saturday obliging anyone aware of the mistreatment of a child to report it to a government committee responsible for the protection of children.

Retarded Homes Meeting Topic

The need to provide homes in Victoria for retarded young adults will be under discussion at 7:30 tonight at the Reg Harris Centre behind the Metropolitan United Church, 1411 Quadra.

The discussion is sponsored by the Greater Victoria Council of Churches and council president Dr. A. E. King said people involved in work with retarded young adults are invited to attend.

Reports will be given at the meeting on other work the council is involved in — the family life conference, world development education, the formation of a property holding society and an ecumenical marriage preparation course.

Judges Crack Down

MONTREAL (CP) — In the face of grwoing pressure from the Quebec government, some sessions court judges have begun to impose stiff sentences on persons convicted of crimes of violence. A recent example is a 17-year-old boy sentenced to 10 years in prison for 13 armed robberies.

A 33-year-old man who got so mad at a persistently ringing telephone that he ripped it off the wall and hurled it through a double glass window was fined $150 in Victoria provincial court Wednesday.

Howard Burns of 3110 Irma pleaded guilty to mischief when he appeared before Judge Fred Green.

According to police, Burns had taken a room in the Canterbury Inn, 310 Gorge, May 31 waiting for his house to be made ready for him to move into.

Police said Burns had been drinking at the time and became incensed by the ringing of the telephone in his room.

The window cost $65 to replace.

Judge Harold Alder sentenced Ronald Nelson Deyotte, 38, no fixed address, to 14 days in jail for theft under $200 and possession of stolen property under $200.

Deyotte pleaded guilty to both charges, which were laid after police stopped and searched him on Sunday as he walked on Fisgard. Police found he was carrying two packages of stewing meat and a gallon bottle of wine.

Deyotte admitted he had just shoplifted the meat from Warehouse store, 47 Songhees, and told police the wine was also stolen.

Alder suspended sentence on George Dan Aleck, 19, of Westholme, B.C. and placed him on 12 months' probation with the condition the youth perform eight hours community service work during that time.

Aleck and six juveniles were charged with the April 22 break-in of Fernwood Purity Store, 2009 Fernwood.

Aleck, who pleaded guilty, was found by police crouched below an open window at the rear of the premises.

Michael Francis Turpin, 30, of Vancouver, charged Tuesday with possession of methamphetemine and MDA both for the purpose of trafficking was released from jail on his own undertaking to appear next Wednesday for election of trial method and plea.

Turpin had been detained in custody one day for the crown to show cause why he should not be released.

At the request of defence counsel, Alder imposed a ban on publication of the bail proceedings.

Turpin was arrested Monday night after Greater Victoria drug officers raided a room at the Estrella Motel, 360 Gorge. Police said at the time they seized a quantity of drugs worth nearly $12,000 on the street market.

Judge William Ostler placed Donovan Geoffrey Nixon of 550 Cedarcrest on 10 months probation after the 17-year-old youth appeared for sentencing on an Aug. 29 charge of possession of marijuana.

Ostler also ordered the youth to attend the Metchosin weekend camp for young offenders and contribute 20 hours community service work.

The court was made $1,100 richer after three people were fined by Ostler for impaired driving.

Elaine Dorothy Stentaford, 36, of 2634 Quadra, was fined $350, Maurice Jean Philion, 55, of 564 Whiteside, $450, and Edwin Barrington Buss, 18, of 4003 Braefoot, $300. Buss was, in addition, placed on six months probation and ordered to attend the impaired drivers' course.

Wild Wage Leapfrog Contest—Munro

MACKASEY HINTS CONTROLS NEEDED

TORONTO (CP) — Postmaster-General Bryce Mackasey said today that if inflation continues and public restraint is not forthcoming a formula may be needed to hold prices and wages down.

In a luncheon speech to the Empire Club of Canada, Mackasey noted that the federal government had rejected compulsory wage and price controls in the 1974 election campaign but then was unable to reach agreement with business and labor on a voluntary restriant plan.

"Out of one side of our mouth we holler at government red tape and out of the other we make demands that bind us with it," he said.

Mackasey said it was not just labor and business that was making demands.

"Everyone is making demands on the state-minorities, women's and citizens' groups, environmentalist, consumers.

HAMILTON (CP) — Labor Minister John Munro said Wednesday the high level of wage settlements for increasingly militant groups, such as teachers, public servants and police, during the last few years has "disarranged the economic pecking order.

"This has in turn touched off a wild leapfrogging contest within the organized work force, as industrial workers try to regain their long-held pre-eminence in the pay scale," he said in a speech to the faculty of economics at McMaster University.

Munro said it was time other groups recognized the legitimate role of unions in society. Unions were no more steeped in self-interest than other groups, he said, and labor was not irresponsible, selfsish and insenstive to social and economic needs.

"As minister of labor, I have been particlarly concerned over the denial to organized labor of its rightful share in decision-making . . . There is a deplorable lack of labor representation on many important policy-making and advisory bodies."

Munro said unions have been constructive institutions without which society would be worse off.

He said he was concerned about the system of sharing national wealth.

"I am the first to admit that some wage demands are excessive by any standard. But I don't blame the unions. They are simply doing what comes naturally under our present jungle-law system."

Unions, he said, have learned to use their power effectively and they are not doing anything society forbids.

"Those who wield the most economic clout — buisness executives, organized workers, professionals, investors — take disproportionately large shares, leaving the old, the unorganized and other disadvantaged groups with left-over crumbs.

Munro also said he saw nothing wrong with some Canadian workers having pay rates above American counterparts because in some industries Canadian productivity is higher.

But he said decisions by foreign interests sometimes worked against Canada. American executives of United Aircraft of Canada in Longueuil, Que., and Firestone in Hamilton did not want to set precedents in Canada that would carry over to American workers, he said.

The result was long strikes in those plants.

Findings Push Back London's Age

LONDON (UPI) — Archaeologists have found evidence that Lodon already was a settlement in the bronze age, 3,300 years ago, pushing back the origins of the city by many centuries.

Digging under way on a site bombed and cleared during the Second World War also has produced flint flakes made by stone age men perhaps 12,000 years ago.

The site is near St. Paul's Cathedral, on what would have been a strategic hill in ancient times. The invading Romans in 55 B.C. established their capital there, displacing a small nomadic tribe.

The present discoveries by a team from the City of London Museum are the first to confirm permanent settlement before the Roman occupation.

RESEARCH FLOE SPLITS UP

SEATTLE (UPI) — A three-mile-long ice floe in the Beaufort Sea containing an Arctic research camp split into several peices Wednesday and 11 scientists had to be flown to safety.

The camp, established last March to study such floes, was in the process of rotating crews and had about two dozen persons on it when the break began Wednesday morning. It forced at least a temporary halt to research as scientists left by plane.

"We anticipated this might happen," said Richard Trowbridge, associate project director. "It has happened before to research camps run by both the Russians and us. But while previous breaks have been larger, this one went right down the centre of the camp.

"While we're studying the process, we'd rather it did not happen where we were sitting."

After the main break Wednesday, other splits developed, breaking the ice into pieces, the smallest of which was as large as a city block. The original floe was more than three miles long.

Labatt's Lays Off

Labatt's Victoria brewery will start laying off employees later today as the operation begins a shutdown caused by an informational picket line blocking its driveway.

The layoffs will start with the beer delivery truck drivers — six drivers and three helpers — but could extend to the rest of the 100 employees "as we run out of items to put beer into," Labatt's spokesman Brice Thom said today.

The picket line, comprised of Nanaimo area hotel owners and a few industry workers, has stopped the delivery of beer from the brewery and the delivery of glass bottles to the brewery since it was put up Tuesday morning.

The hotelmen are protesting the forced closure of many up-island hotels because of the beer distributors strike.

Labatt's has applied to the Labor Relations Board for a ruling ordering that the picket line be taken away from the driveway entrances to the plant.

Thom said he expected some legal action on the application by Tuesday or Wednesday next week.

"We're not asking that the line be removed all together — it's only an information line, but we want legal action to clear the driveways," Thom said.

He said between 10 and 15 sign-carrying pickets walk up an down in front of the entrances, about three feet apart, making it impossible for the drivers to get their trucks through without injuring someone.

The pickets claimed earlier that their line is scanctioned by the Hotel and Restaurant Employees Union, but union representative Tom Luseombe told a Victoria Labor Council meeting Wednesday night the union does not endorse "that parading around down there."

The delivery halt at Labatt's is expected to close down city beer parlors by the weekend.

About eight pubs had already been closed by the beer distributors strike, and the remaining 20 were relying on direct delivery from Labatt's for their supplies.

GAS TALKS

Labor Minister Bill King has summoned both sides in the propane distributors strike to meet him today for talks.

Carl Anshelm, spokesman for Transport Labor Relations which bargains for the companies, said he has been asked to attend the meeting.

Dig-In for 3 Months, Pulp Strikers Told

By LIZ HUGHES
Times Staff

Pulp workers in B.C. are being told by their leaders to "dig in" for another two or three months of the strike that has crippled the province's major industry.

A letter sent earlier this week to members of the Kamloops local of the Pulp, Paper and Woodworkers of Canada union, urges the members to find interim employment and to hang on for at least two more months of the strike.

The same message was conveyed to the PPWC members in the Nanaimo local at a membership meeting Wednesday night. Nanaimo PPWC leader Bruce Tunstall said today.

"We're telling them it can be two or three months and there was no panic in the membership, they just said fine," Tunstall said.

"Surprisingly enough, after three months, there was good solidarity and no weakness."

The pulp workers went on strike July 16, closing down at least 90 per cent of the forest industry in B.C. Talks convened by the provincial government between the pulp unions and the industry last week broke down when neither side appeared willing to budge from their original positions.

The industry accepted recommendations made by special mediator Mr. Justice Henry Hutcheon and said it was their final position.

The unsigned letter sent to Kamloops area members said they deserve and are entitled to "something more than the Hutcheon report."

Tunstall said the letter in Kamloops was a local letter, not from the provincial office of the union. He said it was sent to Kamloops members "because so many of them have left town to find other jobs."

The main pulp mill in Kamloops was closed down for almost a month before the rest of the B.C. mills, because of a dispute over local issues.

Most other PPWC locals in the province are holding meetings this week to keep the membership informed, Tunstall said.

The letter suggested that Kamloops members "get out and get a job somewhere else and help keep yourself up and the industry down until they (the companies) are desper-

Trudeaus Welcome Third Son

OTTAWA (CP) — Margaret Trudeau gave birth today to her third son, and her husband, still a typical nervous father, told reporters that the new baby and his mother "are very well indeed."

The prime minister, who had been up until 4 a.m. — 90 minutes after the baby was born in Ottawa's Civic Hospital — said: "I am a little shaken."

Earlier, he had called friends and, as he recalled it, he announced that the new baby weighed "six pounds and nine inches."

The baby actually weighed seven pounds, 14 ounces.

The prime minister took his wife to hospital about 10 p.m. Wednesday, and Mr. Trudeau said the baby came "rather quickly."

He arrived at his Parliament Hill office today, carrying a two-foot-long wooden box filled with Royal Jamaican cigars. He was laughing and appeared excited, passing around cigars to reporters. "But don't take them all; I need some for cabinet."

Asked about a name for his new son, he said: "We have a couple we're trying to sort out."

As for the girls names they had in mind, "we're saving them for the next time."

. . . CIGARS ALL ROUND

Margaret and Pierre Trudeau's son born today may have two big brothers born Christmas Day but he won't have a tough time convincing them of the illustriousness of his Oct. 2 birthday.

Cartoon character Charlie Brown turned 25 today—and while the proud PM passed out cigars on Parliament Hill, veteran comedian Groucho Marx continued to puff stogies as he turned 85.

And in B.C., Premier David Barrett today turned 45. Arriving at work he laughed off suggestions of being over the hill and said he would telegraph congratulations to the Trudeaus.

"It will be a beautiful child," Barrett added.

Oct. 2 is also the birthday of England's King Richard III, born in 1452, and British author Graham Greene who turned 71 today.

But more than just a day for notable birthdays, today also marks 35 years since Canada's cost-of-living index reached a record of 170.7 and the 20th anniversary of Canada's Unemployment Insurance Act.

Cabinet Shuffle Rumored

Decision on a provincial cabinet shuffle was expected to be reached today during a regular cabinet session.

A cabinet source indicated before entering the cabinet chamber that changes would be discussed. He said there may not be an official announcement right away, but indications are that it will be Friday.

Premier David Barrett has consistently refused comment on speculation that cabinet changes would be announced before the fall sitting of the legislature.

But Barrett indicated during the first leg of his September tour of B.C. that he would relinquish his finance portfolio and most observers predict Agriculture Minister Dave Stupich will be given the job.

Stupich is chartered accountant and during his three years as agriculture minister the government has brought in most of its land reform and farm income programs.

It is also rumored Transport Minister Robert Strachan and Mines Minister Leo Nimsick may lose their portfolios, which would either be divided between other ministers or given to NDP backbenchers.

Kamloops MLA Don Lewis is considered a contender for the agriculture post.

Provincial Secretary Ernie Hall confirmed a new agent-general in London would be appointed this weekend, but he would not indicate who will get the job.

Rear-Admiral Michael Stirling retired from the post in June and the government has been re-evaluating the position since then.

Asked if a cabinet minister might be appointed, Hall smiled and said he could not comment.

HEALTH OFFICIALS FLUNK PHYSICAL

VANCOUVER (UPI) — A simple two-step fitness test Wednesday gave the unhappy word to scores of B.C. health officials—they're pretty poor physical specimens.

"Most of those under 40 were given a rating of minimum desirable personal fitness," said test evaluator Hugh Venables. "That means they fall into the group of average unfit Canadians of their age and sex.

"We advised them to engage in regular physical activity to move into a higher fitness level."

Hospital administrators, department heads and trustees were invited to take the test as they arrived for the opening of the three-day annual meeting of the B.C. Health Associaton.

Delegates took the test by stepping up and down two eight-inch steps for six minutes, band music paced them—faster for younger participants, slower for older ones.

Pound Nears Record $2 Low

Times News Services

LONDON — The battered and ailing British pound plunged today to its lowest level, nearing the crisis value of $2 (U.S.) for the first time in history.

Bankers and money market dealers said it could well dip below $2 by the weekend unless the Bank of England stepped in to shore it up. They said it has done so only on a minor scale so far.

Dealers blamed the pound's drop largely on reported large scale selling Wednesday by an unnamed Arab oil country, which was said to be switching reserves held here and in financial crisis-ridden New York City into French francs.

Soon after money markets opened, the pound dropped to an all time low value of $2.0270. Its "official" rate is $2.40.

Fall of the pound had little effect on the U.S. dollar on European money markets. The dollar improved slightly in Paris while gaining against the pound but was slightly lower elsewhere. French bankers predicted the dollar's recent decline was about over in view of the improvement in the U.S. economy.

The pound's dramatic nose dive meant a bonanza for American and other tourists still crowding London. It meant they now were getting nearly 20 per cent more for their dollars, deutschmarks, francs or guilders than a year ago.

FIVE KILLED IN BELFAST

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (UPI) — Five persons were shot and killed today in two separate shootings that shattered a peaceful week in Northern Ireland. Six bomb attacks hit the province within a matter of hours.

One man died and two others were seriously hurt in a bomb explosion at a photographic store on the outskirts of Belfast.

Three Roman Catholics were fatally wounded in a shooting at a wine shop in central Belfast. The manager of a protestant bar was shot dead in another incident in the city.

Four bomb attacks were reported earlier.

Supermarket Talks Started

VANCOUVER (CP) — Clive McKee, a labor relations consultant, said today that exploratory meetings are in progress in the food industry dispute which has closed 125 Greater Vancouver supermarkets since Sept. 5.

McKee, who would not say when the talks began, said he was assisting the parties in mediation and was not acting as an industrial inquiry commissioner.

3 Killed In Bank Violence

Times News Services

MONTREAL — Two aborted bank robberies at separate branches of the Banque Canadienne Nationale ended Wednesday in the death of the two would-be robbers and a six-year-old school boy.

In a third Montreal robbery, three bandits escaped with $72,000 after using a tow-truck to smash through the rear wall of a credit union.

Six-year-old Roui Sa, held hostage with 15 classmates when their school bus was hijacked by a bank bandit, died after being shot following a police chase through city streets.

An autopsy will be performed today to determine whether the bullet that killed the boy was fired by the bandit or police.

The bandit, also killed was identified as Denis Martel, 33.

The man, brandishing a pistol had forced the school bus driver to try to elude police in a 25-minute high-speed chase through the streets of the city's north end.

A police cruiser eventually rammed the bus head-on.

About 50 police officers, shielded behind their cars, surrounded the bus and exchanged fire with the bandit.

The family of Roui Sa Wednesday night denounced police handling of the incident in which the boy died.

"They should have let the school bus go with the bandit," said John Sa, Roui's uncle.

"Money is only money and you can't buy back Roui's life.

Plant Where Eight Died Closed for Blast Probe

BELOEIL, Que. (CP) — Canadian Industries Ltd. (CIL) officials say a special inquiry involving federal, provincial and company experts will be established to determine the cause of a massive explosion that killed eight workers and sent seven others to hospital Wednesday.

CIL works manager Allan MacKinnon said all manufacturing of explosives in the rest of the plant site, 15 miles east of Montreal, will be terminated until results of the inquiry are known.

The explosion occurred shortly before 8 p.m. EDT and could be heard for miles. It scattered debris for thousands of feet and shattered windows as far as four miles away.

Dead are Gerard Beauregard, Pierre Bernier, Alain Bedard, Pierre Fournier, Jean Ouellette, Edgar Racine and Gerard Caron. The name of an eighth victim was withheld pending notification of next-of-kin.

Scores of people were treated for minor cuts and bruises at a special field hospital set up near the scene and area hospitals reported treating others for similar injuries caused by flying glass from shattered windows.

Fire departments from two neighboring communities along with the McMasterville fire department battled the fire for more than three hours before bringing it under control. Their job was hampered by the intense heat from the fire which shot flames 250 feet into the air.

One CIL official, who said he did not wish to be identified, estimated damage at the plant at close to $1 million. Police said estimates of damage to buildings in the shock area of the blast will not be determined for days.

Some nearby homes were shaken by the explosion.

Witnesses at the scene said it looked like a major airline disaster as police used dogs to find parts of human bodies strewn about in the darkness.

"I've seen pieces of bodies — a hand and a foot — lying in the rubble," said Jacques Tremblay, 21, a former CIL employee.

The explosion occurred in a 2,000-square-foot building, one of many in the square-mile CIL plant. The building was used in the manufacture of an explosive called cap-sensitive slurries.

"It's one of the new generation of explosives," said CIL spokesman Charles Dunbar.

"It's not as sensitive as nitroglycerine."

Dunbar said the explosive marketed by CIL under the trade name Power Mex, is generally considered stable and is commonly used as a blasting agent in mining and construction.

City Pays Six Workers $26,000 for Not Being Sick

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

The rationale of giving cash rewards to City Hall employees who stay healthy has been questioned by Victoria aldermen, but committee today recommended payment of $26,000 in accumulated sick leave benefits to six former employees.

The personnel, formerly on the city's assessment staff, were transferred to the newly-created B.C. Assessment Authority last October.

Top of the list is former city assessor Jack Ozard, who receives $7,126, and next comes his assistant, Cranston Browning, with $5,852.

Four other ex-employees get $3,473, $3,816, $2,803 and $2,955 respectively.

Ald. Bob Ellis commented that the system seems to be based on the strange assumption "that if a guy is lucky enough to remain healthy he should be paid extra for it."

Committee chairman Ald. Sam Bawlf admitted he, too, found the policy "troublesome," and added: "The accumulated amount is pretty startling."

City manager Jim Bramley explained that one of the reasons for adopting the arrangement some years ago was to "deter people from staying away who were on the borderline healthy and sick."

He conceded that the incentive to come to work under such circumstances diminishes somewhat after the person concerned has put in his 10-year qualifying period, "but at least for the first 10 to 15 years it helps."

The option of banking sick leave and taking the cash equivalent on leaving city employment — for retirement or any other reason — is provided for in the city's collective agreements with its four major unions: police, firefighters, inside employees and outside employees.

The 30 or so senior, non-union staff also have the privilege, but some smaller unions representing only a handful of employees do not.

Sick leave is allotted on a graduated scale — 12 days per year after the first year's service, 18 days annually after the first five years and 24 after the next 15.

City personnel director Terry FitzPatrick explained after the meeting that the employees can accrue half the unused portion of their sick leave each year.

After 10 years' service, if they retire, resign or leave for any other reason, they are entitled to claim 75 per cent of the accumulated amount up to a maximum of 26 weeks or 130 working days.

The lump sum payment is made at their then-current rate of pay.

"It takes about 18 to 20 years to reach the maximum with a perfect sick leave record," FitzPatrick said.

(In Ozard's case, he had actually accumulated 339 days of sick leave so he qualifies for the 130-day maximum. Seventy-five per cent of 130 times his daily rate of $73.09 produces the $7,126 total.)

Some Thoughts On Sloth —Can A Man Do Nothing?

When my wife and I were up at Qualicum for a brief, Indian Summer vacation, as I noted the other day, we lounged at the side of a heated swimming pool and I made some notes on sloth.

Webster's defines sloth, by the way, as "disinclination to action or labor" and, I have to admit, it's a subject that's interested me from about the age of six onward.

The notes are both illegible and incoherent, perhaps because, like any other work, writing — even note-making — is not meant to be done in pleasant or comfortable surroundings. Almost every great work has been created in a dank prison cell or a hotel room that overlooks an alley or some other rotten place, which is why authors who become great financial successes invariably find that the rewards and the artistic failure often arrive simultaneously.

It has not been without the penalty of guilt feelings, since I come from a generation that felt guilty about almost everything, but I have always thought that sloth was really what I most wanted in life. This may—or may not — have come as the result of starting work when I was 16 years of age and fairly galloping on the old treadmill in the years since. "The bitch-Goddess, Success," as someone once called it, became an obsession with those of us who survived The Great Depression (little dreaming that another, under a different name, would catch up with us) and hard work was presumed to be the shortest route. It dumbfounds me now, but at one time I ran a city desk and wrote six of these essays each and every week for, no other reason except that it seemed the proper thing to do.

But always my secret ambition was to do absolutely nothing. Sloth was the real reward I was subconsciously hunting. Independence, the elusive goal, was synonymous with indolence. My dream of success was a very slow boat to China.

When these moments came, I invariably confused them with contentment. Once, some years go, my wife and I flew to Mazatlan, before it became such a tourist trap. We walked along the shore, watching the dolphins and diving pelicans and picking up sea-shells and we lay in the fine sand, warmed by the Mexican sun, cooled by the Pacific breeze.

"I wish I knew why we were going home next week when this is all I ask of life," I said, or words to that effect, to my wife. It seemed the whole answer to me then, as it has on Bermudan and Cuban and other beaches in such rare moments.

On that trip we had met and become firm friends with a former Toronto advertising executive who, in middle age, under the influence of a Gauguin biography, had gone to the Mazatlan beaches as his escape from the rat-race. He was not exactly an admirable man, having financed his life in the sun by cashing in on his insurance policies and leaving his loved ones with a bare subsistence, but he seemed to have found the answer to living. He had a cheap supply of tequilla, a compliant Mexican girl and all those sea shells.

I thought it was the answer, at least, until several months later when we had a letter from him. He was back in Toronto, back in the advertising business, back with good, stout wife and his mewling children. He dismissed the Mazatlan episode in one sentence. I've never forgotten. "It got just too boring," he wrote.

I was thinking of that again by the Qualicum pool after we'd driven over to Alberni. We were going to hit some balls at the driving range there, but the range was closed ("Ball-pickers all in school," the sign said). On the way back to Parksville we picked up a couple of hitch-hikers, hairy young men who had spent the summer, it turned out, in a driftwood lean-to on Long Beach. It seemed to me a wonderful thing to do and I said as much.

"Well, it wasn't all that great," one of the young men admitted. "The first couple of weeks were fine, got all of the cobwebs of city living out of our hair. But after that, well, I don't know. We fought a lot, which was the last thing either of us expected" — I could see him, in the rear view mirror, grinning at his friend and the friend grinning back — "but the truth is we never did find it easy to do nothing."

I can't read them, as I say, but I fancy this is the central theme of the notes I made. Whatever else you may say of sloth, it's not an easy condition for the human psyche. You may think that this "disinclination to action or labor" is a desirable attitude, perhaps even enjoy it as a brief interlude, but the perverse human spirit evntually will insist on some activity.

Given the chance, say, to lie forever on that Mazatlan shore I expect that in a day or two I'd be up on one elbow, then up on my feet, looking for some way to fill the vacuum of an existence that, for all the wrong reasons, might seem purposeless.

This is not a manifestation of the search for success or independence or even financial security. I have been with aging multi-millionaires who could lie bonelessly forever in the sun; yet can't manage a day of it without some inner, compulsive need to do something, anything. Indeed, it may just be the shortest path to boredom which, for most of us, is a living death.

It is, I agree, a dreary prospect. It means that some of my own most cherished fantasies — I have often thought of spending the rest of my life just listening to the waves on the shore or finding pictures in the clouds — might not stand the test of reality, that a lifetime of hateful work might just be my heritage when I no longer have to do it. That way lies, if not madness, at least the death of a dream and, with me, dreams die hard.

At EMI, a Program to De-Bug Families

DON VIPOND
Times Staff

Parents forget — forget what the world looked like when they were just three feet tall, forget what terrified them, what they liked and longed for, the kooky things they did and why.

If you had to put into a handful of words what that place on the sixth floor of the Eric Martin Institut is all about — you might say it's for kids who are driving their families and themselves 'round the bend.

On the sixth floor children in turmoil, from infancy to age 15, come to live for five weeks while a group of young men and women with a bountiful supply of sympathy and tolerance try to get inside their heads, see the world as they see it to define what's bugging them so.

Parents (often there's just one) come along for weekly talks. They're bugged too of course, not only with their child but with all the other burdens which plague adults.

For the staff of 22, led by psychiatrist Phil Ney, the objective is to help find a different pattern for the family's life, a way for them to live together which everyone thinks is worth the effort.

The children's unit on the sixth floor, with room for 10 youngsters, has been operating almost three years now. The signs suggest it's a winner.

Before it opened, one in three children treated at EMI were re-admitted. But only six per cent of the 275 youngsters who have stayed on the sixth floor have come back for another stay.

A check of families seven months after shows 94 per cent are getting along as families.

While the program is strictly voluntary, some children are reluctant to start. Five weeks later, all are reluctant to leave. While staff is probing to find the source of troubles, it takes time to build their confidence because most of these children see themselves as failures.

While they're here they begin to realize the world can be a happy place," says Ney. "They have fun but they also realize they're being helped."

Ney points out that the unit isn't trying to replace parents. No one can do that. The children stay five weeks, no more, no less. That's proved to be an efficient amount of time.

When the stay is over, the staff writes out "specific prescriptions" for the family, the family's doctor and the child's teacher. ("If this happens, we suggest you do that . . .")

In the vast number of cases, parents who follow suggestions and stick to them find they work, says Ney.

The staff includes a psychologist, social worker, teachers, nurses, orderlies and occupational therapists. On the face of it the unit is expensive.

"What we're saying to the public-at-large is we're saving you a lot of money," say Ney. "If we can keep kids out of institutions, it's a lot better for everyone in the long run."

No Charge In Fatal Olympic Blaze

No criminal action is contemplated in connection with the fatal fire June 21 at the Royal Olympic Hotel, regional prosecutor Wally Anderson said today.

Anderson said he did not feel there were sufficient grounds for prosecution but indicated the case would remain open in the event further evidence comes to light that might warrant a charge being laid.

A coroner's inquest concluded Aug. 23 that Walter Stanley of Resolute Bay, N.W.T., a guest in Room 210 of the hotel, started the fire through careless smoking. The six-man jury said Stanley failed to take responsible action when he first became aware of the fire in his room.

Elizabeth Mae Towers, 20, of Trail, Lorna Ann Minnis, 37, of Vancouver, and Charles McDonald, 90, a permanent hotel resident, were killed in the early morning blaze that gutted the interior of the seven-storey hotel.

Anderson said for the crown to prosecute it would have to prove there was a "wanton and reckless disregard for the lives and safety of others." Such evidence was lacking, he added.

The coroner's jury also cited inadequate fire safety standards at the hotel as a factor which contributed to the deaths of the three victims.

A spokesman for the B.C. Supreme Court in Victoria indicated today no civil action is pending against the hotel owners.

According to the Statute of Limitations an aggrieved party has one year to initiate an action.

Area Teachers, Trustees Open Salary Talks

By KIT COLLINS

First salary bargaining talks started today between lower Vancouver Island teachers and school trustees, one of only three zones in the province willing to give the provincial government's new negotiating system a try.

Teachers' spokesman Frank Mather said today that representatives are "under immense pressure" to compress all the work that needs to be done into the time frame provided under legislation passed earlier this year.

"But we're entering with optimism," he said.

Representatives could have used a much longer time period to work out a basic contract similar in intent to contracts last year in each of the five school districts included in the regional bargaining zone.

The system of local bargaining between trustees and teachers in each district also allowed better speaking contact with teachers locals membership, he said.

Education Minister Eileen Dailly said Wednesday she hopes that the lower Vancouver Island group and the other two functioning under the zonal bargaining system — East Kootenay and the Okanagan — will set examples for other districts in future negotiations.

Although the minister said she is not surprised that the vast majority of B.C. school teachers opted out of the zonal system, B.C. trustees spokesman Mike Berg has accused teachers of purposely "fragmenting" the new system.

President of the B.C. School Trustees Association, Berg charged Wednesday that teachers are "totally irresponsible" in their demands and are trying to force negotiations into compulsory arbitration by opting out of the zonal system.

Of 75 school district teachers' associations in B.C., only 17 decided to bargain on a zonal basis while 69 school boards of the 75 districts had chosen the zonal bargaining.

Berg said teachers had opted out of the system in an attempt to use "divide and conquer strategy." He told the Times that because only three partial bargaining zones are left teachers are placed in a superior bargaining position.

"By whip-sawing one district against another they can force boards into compulsory arbitration," he said.

Teachers demands for 20 per cent increases are ridiculous, he added, particularly when some members are now earning up to $35,000 a year as administrators and $21,000 as classroom teachers.

But B.C. Teachers' Federation president Bill Broadley refuted Berg's charges.

The legislation, he said clearly allows for teachers and school boards to opt for local bargaining of salaries.

For Berg to charge "that one group is sabotaging negotiations when it is simply following the law of the land, shows he just doesn't understand what the legislation is."

Referring to salary demands, Broadley said teachers will be seeking the going rate. "Recent measures of the going rate are in the 20 per cent area. But the BCTF doesn't set what teachers get, the local does that.

"Surely the public doesn't expect teachers to subsidize the system by accepting less," he said.

Under the legislation passed last spring, the province set up 13 zones encompassing 75 school districts for school board-teacher contract negotiation.

The five districts in the lower Vancouver Island zone are Greater Victoria, Saanich, Sooke, Gulf Islands, Cowichan. Only North Cowichan opted out.

Dailly said she didn't consider the legislation had collapsed because of the lack of province-wide support for zonal bargaining.

She said she hopes more teachers would accept the option, but "at no time did we expect that we would have the whole province in one year."

Dairies Face Paper Dearth

Victoria dairies are having to 'scrounge around" to come up with paper containers for their milk-products because of the shortage caused by the 11-week B.C. pulp strike, a dairy manager said today.

R. E. Cottingham, manager of Island Farms Dairy in Victoria said his operation is managing to get some supply "from other sources", but if that supply dries up they could be in trouble.

"We have a sufficient supply for a while, providing we can keep these other sources going. It's definitely not a normal situation. We wouldn't want to be in this situation all the time," he said.

Cottingham declined to reveal the dairy's alternate source of paper supply, but said "we scrounge around."

He said the existing supply of containers varied with the products — "For some products we have enough for several months, but for others, it's less than a month."

Spokesmen for other Victoria dairies said they have about one months supply of paper milk containers on hand and no immediate prospects for additional supplies once those are gone.

However, I. R. Fuller of Silverwood Dairies said his company has a large supply of alternative packages on hand. The company plans to begin selling milk Monday in a one-quart plastic pouch bag. The bag is disposed of once it is empty. The pouch was part of a new merchandising method planned by the company and was not brought in specifically with the strike in mind.

The company has a large stock of returnable plastic bottles as well.

A spokesman for Palm Dairies in Victoria said that company also had about four weeks supply of paper cartons on hand.

CUPE Pact Snags

Remember the CUPE dispute?

It halted garbage collection, road repairs and tax bills for three months earlier this year and it's not settled yet — at least not officially.

Eight months after the city's outside workers first went on strike triggering the shutdown, and five months after they agreed to return to work, there is still no formally signed contract between the city and the 280 outside workers.

One item in the contract is still to be worked out and the two sides have, in effect, agreed to disagree on it for awhile, says city manager Jim Bramley.

The issue is centred around trade rates worked out in the contract — not what the rates are, but who they apply to.

Bramley said all other parts of the agreement are finalized, the new rates are being paid to other outside workers and there are no dangers in having an unsigned contract.

There is an understanding between the two parties that this is only one point we're not agreed on," he said.

Jim Walker, president of the outside workers local of the Canadian Union of Public Employees says the matter willbe brought up by the union at a finance committee meeting of council Friday.

Walker says discussion on the issue was postponed while negotiators for both sides were on holidays and that with a little luck, the contract can be signed before negotiations get under way next year for the next contract.

Ask The Times

Q. Will you tell me how the Old Age Security is financed and how this contributory fund is deducted if there is no income tax submitted. P.T.

A. There are two types of federal government pensions and both are financed out of general tax revenues. All Canadians 65 and over are entitled to receive these, regardless of whether they have ever paid taxes. They are the Canadian Old Age Security Pension of $129.28 per month (effective in October) paid to everyone 65 and over. In addition, there is a Guaranteed Income Supplement to those in need 65 and over, which can raise the basic pension (in October) to a maximum of $219.96 for single pensioners and to a maximum of $209.81 each for married pensioners. How much depends upon the amount of tax he paid in the previous year.

In addition to these two pensions, there is the Canada Pension Plan which is open only to those who have contributed to the Canada Pension Fund. These contributions at the present time can be made only by those who are employed, although this regulation may in future be changed. The amount of the Canada Pension Plan pension varies with the amount contributed into the fund.

Catch-22 Claim By Air Canada

An attempt by Air Canada to claim $195 from City Hall, after its downtown office was left without heat during the recent civic strike-lockout, ran into a Catch-22 situation at Victoria's finance committee meeting today.

Like other business premises in Centennial Square, Air Canada's reservations office was deprived of its normal heating when pickets prevented oil deliveries to the central plant serving all buildings around the square.

The $195 claimed today represented rental costs for two electric heaters ($80), plus the amount by which the airline's electricity bill exceeded its normal hydro costs ($115).

Catch-22?

The city's lease agreement, as city solicitor Jakob de Villiers noted, contains "a covenant on the part of the city to heat, as well as a clause whereby the city is absolved from all responsibility for failure to honor its covenant to heat."

Therefore, the committee recommended rejection of the claim.

In any case, noted Ald. Bob Ellis, payment would have created an unfortunate precedent. "If we pay this one they'll come crawling out of the woodwork all over the place."

Teargas Damages Favored

When city police captured fugitive Danny Cain by firing teargas through a window last July 15 they caused $446.60 damage to the property of John Munro at 1166 Summit.

Today city fianance committee recommended Munro be given a compassionate grant covering the repairs because neither the householder's insurance nor the city's indemnity applies.

Comptroller-treasurer Mason Sheldrick said it was to his knowledgee the first claim of its kind against the city, and that it should not be considered a precedent.

Cain, an escaper from prison, was subject of two manhunts before police cornered him in the Summit duplex.

Firemen Battle As Chicks Cluck

A flock of chickens took to the trees and clucked frenetically as Saanich firemen battled to put out a fire in an unoccupied two-room cottage at Interurban and Wilkinson early today.

A fire department spokesman said the fire, reported at 12:30 a.m., destroyed the building owned by Lorne McNutt and used as a storage shed. About 100 bails of hay stored inside went up in smoke. No damage figure has been determined but it is expected to be minimal.

Firemen believe the fire may have started by spontaneous combustion. They were at the scene for nearly three hours.

The spokesman said when the fire broke out free-ranging chickens in McNutt's yard flew up to the trees and passed a noisy commentary on the firemen at work.

McNutt is a well-known Saanich resident and for years held the contract to collect garbage in the municipality.

Chamber Opposes Any Store Hour Restrictions

Victoria Chamber of Commerce Wednesday passed a resolution stating that store hours should be left to the free market place and not restricted by municipal bylaw.

A copy of the resolution will be sent to Vicoria city council, which is scheduled to give first readings next week to a trades licence bylaw amendment restricting the sale of a wide range of goods on Sundays and statutory holidays.

Chamber president Jack Hutchins said the resolution should be viewed as a positive stand by Victoria businessmen on the question of Sunday shopping.

Hutchins said the resolution was obviously triggered by a proposed Victoria City bylaw restricting the sale of some items on Sundays and holidays but was not meant to be critical, only positive.

The resolution supported a personal statement made earlier in the day by Hutchins that businesses should be left free to make the decision for themselves about whether to remain open on Sunday.

Alan Aldous, president of the Downtown Business Association, said the association's executive will be meeting next week to discuss another matter, and it's likely the Sunday closing question will be raised at the time.

Not being a merchant himself — he is manager of the Victoria branch of the Royal Trust Company — Aldous said it's difficult for him to express any personal comment until he's had a chance to hear the views of merchants.

"I can see the pluses, I can see the minuses; it's quite a complex problem," he added.

Revenue from Metal Sales Down 20% from Year Ago

Revenue from metal sales will be down 20 per cent this year from the 1974 level of about $1 billion, the Mining Association of British Columbia says.

The number of operating mines is down to 23 from 28 and the total number of employees is down below 14,000 from a 1973 peak of 15,328.

He and association manager P. R. Matthew were in Victoria Wednesday to present to Mines Minister Leo Nimsick a copy of the Price Waterhouse and Co. report into the B.C. mining industry's 1974 performance.

Little said Nimsick expressed interest in the report but did not comment further.

Little said the report paints a fairly grim picture but fails to reflect the present conditions in the mining industry.

Except for energy resources like coal and petroleum, the mineral industry is facing a difficult year, he said.

The 20 per cent decline in sales applies across the board to all important B.C. minerals but especially copper and zinc.

In a news conference following the Nimsick meeting, Little said there are major problems to be solved before a copper smelter and refinery is constructed in B.C.

These are:

—The need to prove that is economically feasible.

—The problem of disposing of waste materials, particularly sulphur.

These additional sources of copper concentrates will not be found unless tax legislation is changed to make it a more attractive propositon.

The mining association believes there will not be speedy action on the smelter proposal because of the many questions yet to be answered.

A smelter-refinery would cost in the range of $150 million to $200 million. It would employ only about 150 while the same investment in mines would provide work for 1,000 miners.

Markets would have to be found for the copper because only a very small proportion would be purchased in B.C. and a suitable site would have to be located because of the pollution problem.

After these problems are solved, it would take three years to construct the smelter. The associaton indicated that the government was more interested in the project than private industry is at this time.

'Ignore Governments,' Businessman Urges

WINNIPEG (CP) — An Ontario businesssman whose company favors widespread profit sharing said today that management and labor should ignore governments and find a new way to work together.

Sheldon Lush, president of Supreme Aluminum Industries Ltd., of Toronto said companies should offer their employees a new deal and "give them a piece of the action."

"Let's ignore governments," he told the Winnipeg Chamber of Commerce. "Instead, let's go to the people with whom we work, the people who should be our partners and allies . . . "

Earlier this year Supreme allocated about $3,100 to each employee with two or more years' service. About 44 per cent of the company's 500 employees own Supreme stock and an employee-dominated group determines all matters at Supreme which directly concern its workers such as hours of work, pay rates and vacationns.

Lush said business must start to tap the almost untouched potential which exists among our human assets.

He said Canada seems to be stumbling along and it will be quite a task to move into high gear again. But, he said, governments don't even understand the problem.

"Besides, we have called on them (governments) far too often in the past and have thus unwittingly created bureaucratic monsters which are getting larger and larger by feeding on themselves to the point where they are almost unmanageable."

Labatt's Lays Off

Labatt's Victoria brewery will start laying off employees later today as the operation begins a shutdown caused by an informational picket line blocking its driveway.

The layoffs will start with the beer delivery truck drivers — six drivers and three helpers — but could extend to the rest of the 100 employees "as we run out of items to put beer into," Labatt's spokesman Brice Thom said today.

The picket line, comprised of Nanaimo area hotel owners and a few industry workers, has stopped the delivery of beer from the brewery and the delivery of glass bottles to the brewery since it was put up Tuesday morning.

The hotelmen are protesting the forced closure of many up-island hotels because of the beer distributors' strike.

Labatt's has applied to the Labor Relations Board for a ruling ordering that the picket line be taken away from the driveway entrances to the plant.

Thom said he expected some legal action on the application by Tuesday or Wednesday next week.

"We're not asking that the line be removed all together — it's only an information line, but we want legal action to clear the driveways," Thom said.

He said between 10 and 15 sign-carrying pickets walk up an down in front of the entrances, about three feet apart, making it impossible for the drivers to get their trucks through without injuring someone.

The pickets claimed earlier that their line is scanctioned by the Hotel and Restaurant Employees Union, but union representative Tom Luscombe told a Victoria Labor Council meeting Wednesday night the union does not endorse "that parading around down there."

The delivery halt at Labatt's is expected to close down city beer parlors by the weekend.

About eight pubs had already been closed by the beer distributors strike, and the remaining 20 were relying on direct delivery from Labatt's for their supplies.

GAS TALKS

Labor Minister Bill King has summoned both sides in the propane distributors strike to meet him today for talks.

Carl Anshelm, spokesman for Transport Labor Relations which bargains for the companies, said he has been asked to attend the meeting.

Dig-In for 3 Months, Pulp Strikers Told

By LIZ HUGHES
Times Staff

Pulp workers in B.C. are being told by their leaders to "dig in" for another two or three months of the strike that has crippled the province's major industry.

A letter sent earlier this week to members of the Kamloops local of the Pulp, Paper and Woodworkers of Canada union, urges the members to find interim employment and to hang on for at least two more months of the strike.

The same message was conveyed to the PPWC members in the Nanaimo local at a membership meeting Wednesday night, Nanaimo PPWC leader Bruce Tunstall said today.

"We're telling them it can be two or three months and there was no panic in the membership, they just said fine," Tunstall said.

"Surprisingly enough, after three months, there was good solidarity and no weakness."

The pulp workers went on strike July 16, closing down at least 90 per cent of the forest industry in B.C. Talks convened by the provincial government between the pulp unions and the industry last week broke down when neither side appeared willing to budge from their original positions.

The industry accepted recommendations made by special mediator Mr. Justice Henry Hutcheon and said it was their final position.

The unsigned letter sent to Kamloops area members said they deserve and are entitled to "something more than the Hutcheon report."

Tunstall said the letter in Kamloops was a local letter, not from the provincial office of the union. He said it was sent to Kamloops members "because so many of them have left town to find other jobs."

The main pulp mill in Kamloops was closed down for almost a month before the rest of the B.C. mills, because of a dispute over local issues.

Most other PPWC locals in the province are holding meetings this week to keep the membership informed, Tunstall said.

The letter suggested that Kamloops members "get out and get a job somewhere else and help keep yourself up and the industry down until they (the companies) are desper-

Trudeaus Welcome Third Son

OTTAWA (CP) — Margaret Trudeau gave birth today to her third son, and her husband, still a typical nervous father, told reporters that the new baby and his mother "are very well indeed."

The prime minister, who had been up until 4 a.m. — 90 minutes after the baby was born in Ottawa's Civic Hospital — said: "I am a little shaken."

Earlier, he had called friends and, as he recalled it, he announced that the new baby weighed "six pounds and nine inches."

The baby actually weighed seven pounds, 14 ounces.

The prime minister took his wife to hospital about 10 p.m. Wednesday, and Mr. Trudeau said the baby came "rather quickly."

He arrived at his Parliament Hill office today, carrying a two-foot-long wooden box filled with Royal Jamaican cigars. He was laughing and appeared excited, passing around cigars to reporters. "But don't take them all; I need some for cabinet."

Asked about a name for his new son, he said: "We have a couple we're trying to sort out."

As for the girls names they had in mind, "we're saving them for the next time."

. . . CIGARS ALL ROUND

Margaret and Pierre Trudeau's son born today may have two big brothers born Christmas Day but he won't have a tough time convincing them of the illustriousness of his Oct. 2 birthday.

Cartoon character Charlie Brown turned 25 today—and while the proud PM passed out cigars on Parliament Hill, veteran comedian Grcucho Marx continued to puff stogies as he turned 85.

And in B.C., Premier David Barrett today hit 45. Arriving at work he laughed off suggestions of being over the hill and said he would telegraph congratulations to the Trudeaus.

"It will be a beautiful child," Barrett added.

Oct. 2 is also the birthday of England's King Richard III, born in 1452, and British author Graham Greene who turned 71 today.

But more than just a day for notable birthdays, today also marks 35 years since Canada's cost-of-living index reached a record of 170.7 and the 20th anniversary of Canada's Unemployment Insurance Act.

Cabinet Shuffle Near

Decision on a provincial cabinet shuffle was expected to be reached today during a regular cabinet session.

A cabinet source indicated before entering the cabinet chamber that changes would be discussed. He said there may not be an official announcement right away, but indications are that it will be Friday.

Premier David Barrett has consistently refused comment on speculation that cabinet changes would be announced before the fall sitting of the legislature.

But Barrett indicated during the first leg of his September tour of B.C. that he would relinquish his finance portfolio and most observers predict Agriculture Minister Dave Stupich will be given the job.

Stupich is chartered accountant and during his three years as agriculture minister the government has brought in most of its land reform and farm income programs.

It is also rumored Transport Minister Robert Strachan and Mines Minister Leo Nimsick may lose their portfolios, which would either be divided between other ministers or given to NDP backbenchers.

Kamloops MLA Don Lewis is considered a contender for the agriculture post.

Provincial Secretary Ernie Hall confirmed a new agent-general in London would be appointed this weekend, but he would not indicate who will get the job.

Rear-Admiral Michael Stirling retired from the post in June and the government has been re-evaluating the position since then.

Asked if a cabinet minister might be appointed, Hall smiled and said he could not comment.

Gladys Heads North

CAPE HATTERAS, N.C. (AP) — Hurricane Gladys, growing stronger as it moves up the Atlantic coast, swung toward the northeast early today on a course that forecasters said he will take it away from the U.S. mainland but will pose a major threat to shipping interests. Top winds were estimated at 140 miles an hour early today, with gale winds extending 200 miles to the east and 125 miles to the west.

HEALTH OFFICIALS FLUNK PHYSICAL

VANCOUVER (UPI) — A simple two-step fitness test Wednesday gave the unhappy word to scores of B.C. health officials—they're pretty poor physical specimens.

"Most of those under 40 were given a rating of minimum desirable personal fitness,'" said test evaluator Hugh Venables. "That means they fall into the group of average unfit Canadians of their age and sex.

"We advised them to engage in regular physical activity to move into a higher fitness level.'"

Hospital administrators, department heads and trustees were invited to take the test as they arrived for the opening of the three-day annual meeting of the B.C. Health Associaton.

Delegates took the test by stepping up and down two eight-inch steps for six minutes, band music paced them—faster for younger participants, slower for older ones.

Pound Nears Record $2 Low

Times News Services

LONDON — The battered and ailing British pound plunged today to its lowest level, nearing the crisis value of $2 (U.S.) for the first time in history.

Bankers and money market dealers said it could well dip below $2 by the weekend unless the Bank of England stepped in to shore it up. They said it has done so only on a minor scale so far.

Dealers blamed the pound's drop largely on reported large scale selling Wednesday by an unnamed Arab oil country, which was said to be switching reserves held here and in financial crisis-ridden New York City into French francs.

Soon after money markets opened, the pound dropped to an all time low value of $2.0270. Its "official" rate is $2.40.

Fall of the pound had little effect on the U.S. dollar on European money markets. The dollar improved slightly in Paris while gaining against the pound but was slightly lower elsewhere. French bankers predicted the dollar's recent decline was about over in view of the improvement in the U.S. economy.

The pound's dramatic nose dive meant a bonanza for American and other tourists still crowding London. It meant they now were getting nearly 20 per cent more for their dollars, deutschmarks, francs or guilders than a year ago.

FIVE KILLED IN BELFAST

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (UPI) — Five persons were shot and killed today in two separate shootings that shattered a peaceful week in Northern Ireland. Six bomb attacks hit the province within a matter of hours.

Three Roman Catholics were fatally wounded in a shooting at a wine shop in central Belfast. The manager of a protestant bar was shot dead in another incident in the city.

Four bomb attacks were reported earlier.

Supermarket Talks Started

VANCOUVER (CP) — Clive McKee, a labor relations consultant, said today that exploratory meetings are in progress in the food industry dispute which has closed 125 Greater Vancouver supermarkets since Sept. 5.

McKee, who would not say when the talks began, said he was assisting the parties in mediation and was not acting as an industrial inquiry commissioner.

3 Killed In Bank Violence

Times News Services

MONTREAL — Two aborted bank robberies at separate branches of the Banque Canadienne Nationale ended Wednesday in the death of the two would-be robbers and a six-year-old school boy.

In a third Montreal robbery, three bandits escaped with $72,000 after using a tow-truck to smash through the rear wall of a credit union.

Six-year-old Roui Sa, held hostage with 15 classmates when their school bus was hijacked by a bank bandit, died after being shot following a police chase through city streets.

An autopsy will be performed today to determine whether the bullet that killed the boy was fired by the bandit or police.

The bandit, also killed, was identified as Denis Martel, 33.

The man, brandishing a pistol had forced the school bus driver to try to elude police in a 25-minute high-speed chase through the streets of the city's north end.

A police cruiser eventually rammed the bus head-on.

About 50 police officers, shielded behind their cars, surrounded the bus and exchanged fire with the bandit.

The family of Roui Sa Wednesday night denounced police handling of the incident in which the boy died.

"They should have let the school bus go with the bandit," said John Sa, Roui's uncle.

"Money is only money and you can't buy back Roui's life.

Plant Where Eight Died Closed for Blast Probe

BELOEIL, Que. (CP) — Canadian Industries Ltd. (CIL) officials say a special inquiry involving federal, provincial and company experts will be establised to determine the cause of a massive explosion that killed eight workers and sent seven others to hospital Wednesday.

CIL works manager Allan MacKinnon said all manufacturing of explosives in the rest of the plant site, 15 miles east of Montreal, will be terminated until results of the inquiry are known.

The explosion occurred shortly before 8 p.m. EDT and could be heard for miles. It scattered debris for thousands of feet and shattered windows as far as four miles away.

Dead are Gerard Beauregard, Pierre Bernier, Alain Bedard, Pierre Fournier, Jean Ouellette, Edgar Racine and Gerard Caron. The name of an eighth victim was withheld pending notification of next-of-kin.

Scores of people were treated for minor cuts and bruises at a special field hospital set up near the scene and area hospitals reported treating others for similar injuries caused by flying glass from shattered windows.

Fire departments from two neighboring communities along with the McMasterville fire department battled the fire for more than three hours before bringing it under control. Their job was hampered by the intense heat from the fire which shot flames 250 feet into the air.

One CIL official, who said he did not wish to be identified, estimated damage at the plant at close to $1 million. Police said estimates of damage to buildings in the shock area of the blast will not be determined for days.

Some nearby homes were shaken by the explosion.

Witnesses at the scene said it looked like a major airline disaster as police used dogs to find parts of human bodies strewn about in the darkness.

"I've seen pieces of bodies — a hand and a foot — lying in the rubble," said Jacques Tremblay, 24, a former CIL employee.

The explosion occurred in a 2,000 square-foot building, one of many in the square-mile CIL plant. The building was used in the manufacture of an explosive called cap-sensitive slurries.

"It's one of the new generation of explosives," said CIL spokesman Charles Dunbar.

"It's not as sensitive as nitroglycerine."

Dunbar said the explosive marketed by CIL under the trade name Power Mex, is generally considered stable and is commonly used as a blasting agent in mining and construction.

City Pays Six Workers $26,000 for Not Being Sick

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

The rationale of giving cash rewards to City Hall employees who stay healthy has been questioned by Victoria aldermen, but council's finance committee today recommended payment of $2,000 in accumulated sick leave benefits to six former employees.

The personnel, formerly on the city's assessment staff, were transferred to the newly-created B.C. Assessment Authority last October.

Top of the list is former city assessor Jack Ozard, who receives $7,126, and next comes his assistant, Cranston Browning, with $5,852.

Four other ex-employees get $3,473, $3,816, $2,803 and $2,955 respectively.

Ald. Bob Ellis commented that the system seems to be based on the strange assumption "that if a guy is lucky enough to remain healthy he should be paid extra for it."

Committee chairman Ald. Sam Bawlf admitted he, too, found the policy "troublesome," and added: "The accumulated amount is pretty startling."

City manager Jim Bramley explained that one of the reasons for adopting the arrangement some years ago was to "deter people from staying away who were on the borderline between healthy and sick.

He conceded that the incentive to come to work under such circumstances diminishes somewhat after the person concerned has put in his 10-year qualifying period, "but at least for the first 10 to 15 years it helps."

The option of banking sick leave and taking the cash equivalent on leaving city employment — for retirement or any other reason — is provided for in the city's collective agreements with its four major unions: police, firefighters, inside employees and outside employees.

The 30 or so senior, non-union staff also have the privilege, but some smaller unions representing only a handful of employees do not.

Sick leave is allotted on a graduated scale — 12 days per year after the first year's service, 18 days annually after the first five years and 24 after the next 15.

City personnel director Terry FitzPatrick explained after the meeting that the employees can accrue half the unused portion of their sick leave each year.

After 10 years' service, if they retire, resign or leave for any other reason, they are entitled to claim 75 per cent of the accumulated amount up to a maximum of 26 weeks or 130 working days.

The lump sum payment is made at their then-current rate of pay.

"It takes about 18 to 20 years to reach the maximum with a perfect sick leave record," FitzPatrick said.

(In Ozard's case, he had actually accumulated 339 days of sick leave so he qualifies for the 130-day maximum. Seventy-five per cent of 130 times his daily rate of $73.09 produces the $7,126 total.)

Blackmailing the Immigrants

In its zeal to find neat efficient solutions Ottawa's bureaucracy tends to ignore larger principles which have made this country a good place to live. Ongoing federal provincial discussions are considering the possibility of forcing newly arrived immigrants to settle in certain areas. Either they settle and remain for a prescribed period in worker-starved areas of the country or they are denied social services. To suggest such a course is really a smug form of blackmail. In fact, it is even worse. The proposal amounts to indentured servitude, the kind of thing that so many millions of Canadians came to this country to escape.

British Columbia and the federal government, not to mention the provincial College of Physicians and Surgeons, already see eye to eye on foisting a similar condition on immigrant doctors. If it's all right for foreign doctors, why not do it to all those immigrants?, seems to be the logic. Immigration Minister Robert Andras had the decency to say he found the whole idea "somewhat distasteful", although he qualified his remarks adding, that he might be willing to accept the scheme under certain conditions.

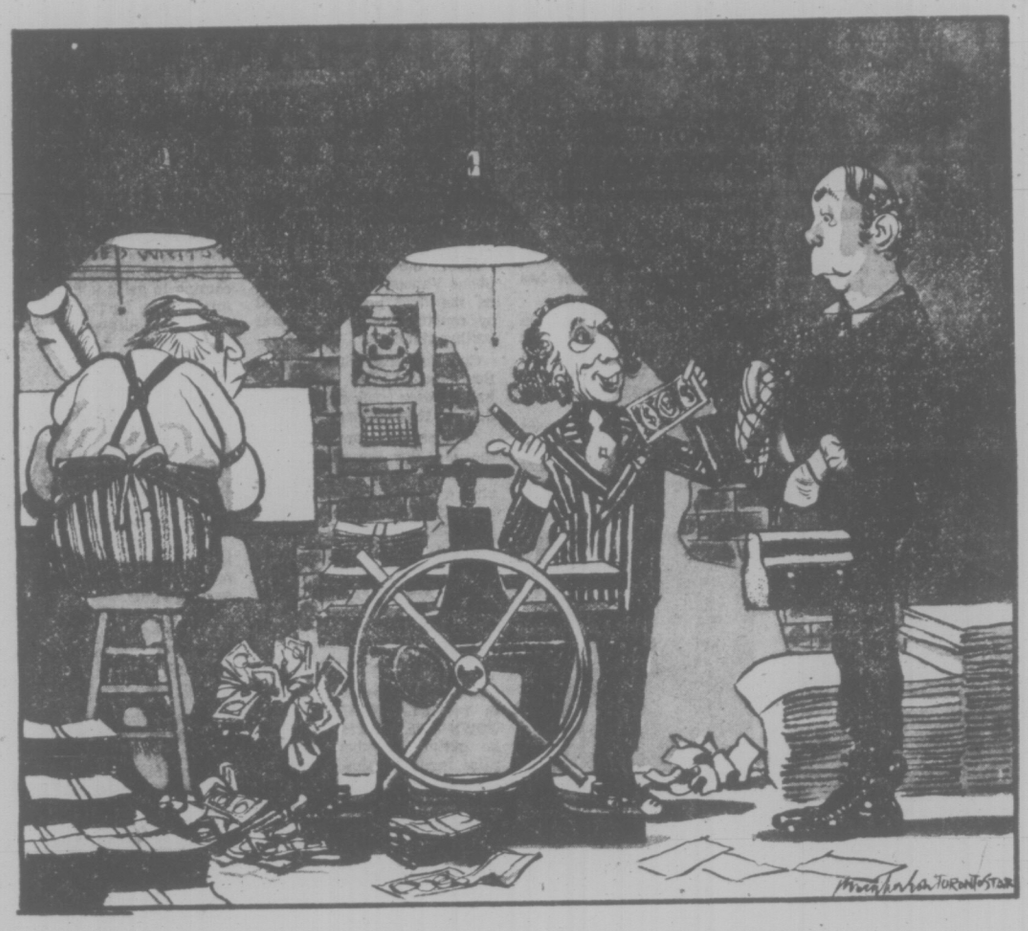
In Victoria Tuesday the immigration minister airily noted that some countries issue identity cards and require citizens to obtain permits before they can move. If such a policy were introduced in Canada it would apply only to immigrants, and not to Canadian citizens he said.

Is this a minister of the crown speaking in a democratic country? We can't believe our ears. If immigrants are required to carry identification cards or work permits, how long will it be before the same is required of all Canadians? Any such Nazi scheme, whether it applies to immigrants or anybody else should be quickly quashed and its authors dismissed.

The logic behind this odious idea is, of course, to smooth out regional economic wrinkles and prevent overcrowding in urban areas where housing or other necessities are in short supply. Both arguments are specious. If a large number of newly arrived immigrants are plopped down in some unsophisticated nether region, racial or religious tensions are sure to follow, as shown by past experience. As to the argument that such social contracts would ease overcrowding in urban areas, what is to prevent the immigrants from moving to the cities in a great wave once they have completed their sentences? Other Canadians do, and the immigrants, human nature being what it is, would soon follow.

If Canadians are so mentally and morally bankrupt as to be considering this solution it would be better if we just closed off the borders entirely. Surely we haven't reached that impasse. The senior immigration officials who thought up this one should put their thinking caps on and climb out of the bell jar.

As for Andras, if he has no better ideas than forcing identity cards on immigrants, he should consider immigrating himself to a political climate where he would be more comfortable.



Shake It and Bake It

Now that Allan Williams has become a lexicographer as well as a Social Crediter in just one day, he should be in a position to rethink the English language by the time the November session rolls around. He made a good start Tuesday when he joined Dr. Pat McGeer and Garde Gardom in embracing Social Credit principles. The silver-haired MLA told the startled throngs crowding the Vancouver press conference that he didn't believe opportunism is derogatory. After all, it was individual initiative and opportunity that made this province great, Williams added.

Why of course. How come us dumb clucks didn't think of that fine rationalization before? It was just like the time McGeer said there were no differences between Liberal and Social Credit principles. That didn't make sense either. It still doesn't. But let us stop and consider a moment. These boys have been out in the sun for a long time. The long march down the yellow brick road started last May. Oh, there's been a stop here, a chat there, but at the centre of the maze Bill Bennett was patiently waiting. Bill could afford to wait. There was no other way out of the maze. Now everybody's home. Conservatives, Liberals, old line Socreds, latent Socreds, all kinds of ingredients. This isn't a party, it's a cake mix.

JAMES RESTON

Trite, Shallow—Ford on Stump

NEW YORK — President Gerald Ford and the press are giving each other a lot of free advice these days, not for the first time. The press is advising the skipper to be a little more careful, lest he gain a few votes but lose his life, and the president is advising the press to be a little less sensational lest it make heroes of assassins and encourage the violence it deplores.

The odds are that both will agree in principle but go on as before — the president will keep working the crowds, with or without his safety vest, and the press will keep playing up the unusual, both on the assumption that this is what pays off with the public.

Ford is obviously not going to listen to tha warnings that scrimmaging with crowds may be injurious to his health, but he might listen to the argument that it's bad for the Republican party.

The evidence is fairly clear that it is. He wows the Republican regulars and raises a lot of money for the GOP, but the more he travels and talks, the more he seems to decline in the polls.

Lousy President?

This tends to prove O'Neill's Law. Thomas O'Neill, the Democratic leader in the House of Representatives and Ford's old adversary, friend and present golfing companion, has always said: "Gerry's a lovely guy but maybe a lousy president. You have to see a lot of him to know how little there is to see."

The reasons for Ford's decline in the polls are fairly clear. He has very little to say on these trips around the country about the present and coming predicaments of the U.S., and he says it rather badly.

He is a dead-honest conservative confronted with radical problems — high rates of inflation, unemployment, frustration and even anger — and he gives the country locker room pep talks on the glories of fiscal responsibility.

Nixon failed because he didn't have any principles, and ironically, Ford may very well fail because he has. For he honestly believes that he can bring the country back to its senses by vetoing the Democratic party spendthrifts. New York is drowning and he gives it a lecture and throws it an anchor. "Waste not, want not," he says. "Help not, vote not," reply the big-city voters.

He is such a modest guy with such long association and sympathy for the sort of conservatives who dominate Republican nominating conventions that he actually takes the Ronald Reagan threat seriously.

His main political problem actually is not to worry about the nomination, but to win the election, and this he cannot do with the Hooverish speeches he has been making in Dallas and the west. He is running a little south of centre, and assuming that the country is in a conservative counterrevolution against the welfare state.

GERALD FORD

Maybe so, but unless the U.S. people have suddenly decided on a course of spiritual reformation and redemption, which is hard to notice here in Times Square, the Ford strategy of dramatizing his political limitations all over the country is not likely to be very successful.

As long as he stayed in Washington struggling with inflation, unemployment and the energy crisis, he was "steady old Gerry," fighting the divided and leaderless Democrats to a scoreless tie. The capital had never before seen so many amiable vetos, and if nobody was very impressed with his performance, nobody was very mad at him either.

But now he is so obviously in the political race that he is diminishing his most precious asset — the feeling in the country that he was concentrating on a hard job and not on himself or his political ambitions.

Amiable But Obvious

Ever since he announced that he was a candidate he has had to be careful to disguise his political speeches so that the Democrats couldn't demand equal time. So he has been mixing up his presidential and political responsibilities, so that nobody quiet knows what is political and what is presidential, and who should pay for what.

This has not helped his good-guy, straight-guy, image, and has led him into literally scores of speeches, interviews, coffee klatches, offhand comments, and so forth.

You should try to get through the transcript of everything the president actually says on one of these three-day invasions of the country. Taken on the whole it is troubling and revealing — obvious, trite, amiably shallow, and all the more so because it is so utterly sincere.

So maybe these trips should be reconsidered on political grounds if not on security grounds. They may not be bad for his physical health, but they are proving to be bad for his political future.

Message Needs Repeating

OTTAWA — Since Donald Macdonald was by far the best choice as finance minister in Prime Minister Trudeau's reconstructed cabinet the operation must be treated as a sort of success.

It should not be automatically put on any higher plane because merely restructuring of the cabinet in ways that do not cause positive alarm is no more than a holding operation. Everything now depends upon future performance and that means, most of all, the prime minister's own performance. He claimed at his press conference, announcing the new ministry, that the government knows that it must provide the country with leadership.

If that is really true, a blinding flash of light seems to have struck the government in the two weeks since the cabinet autumn safari up to Meach Lake in the Gatineau Hills where Trudeau seemed to be suggesting that no one really knew what was meant by those critical words "political leadership." But since the whole weakness of the government so far has been its abdication of leadership it remains to be seen whether a true conversion has occurred.

Behind the scenes there was one dramatic difference from anything that has happened before in the Trudeau period. This time the prime minister had to use all of the prestige of his office to keep a reluctant minister in politics, at least for long enough to give his appointment public credibility.

United in Condemnation

Trudeau has never done anything like that before. Even as recently as a fortnight ago he let the most broadly based minister after himself, John Turner, leave his government with no real attempt to hold him. But with Turner gone, it was obvious that a weak appointment to the finance ministry would be ruinous to the Trudeau regime.

Macdonald is anything but a weak appointment but even so the fact remains that veteran observers here can recall no other period when the country's newspapers have been so united in condemnation of a government. That includes the period when Diefenbaker's government was disintegrating. In those days, at least a few newspapers remained Conservative. None seem to have been supporting the government during the last fortnight.

The press does not always represent the public and its collective positions are not often lasting. Franklin D. Roosevelt won four American presidential elections with the bulk of the newspapers in the United States utterly opposed to him. But when a government runs into as much general criticism as this one has in the last couple of weeks the development is symptomatic of something. Wise politicians recognize that there are lessons to be learned from such things.

When the prime minister talked about economic problems at the press conference after the new ministers had been sworn in he made good sense.

The difficulty, however, is that Trudetu needs to say more or less the same things week after week until he is bored with the sound of the words. He does not have to convince the Ottawa Establishment of the positions he was arguing—it has been convinced of the general appropriateness of those positions for a long time now. He does, however, have to convince the relatively unsophisticated people who make up the mass of the population. It is not going to be easy—if the task is undertaken at all.

. . . should say it again, and again

Those people are deeply suspicious and with good reason—they have seen much of the value of money disappear at a frightening rate. Much of the drive behind some of the unreasonable wage demands of the day arises simply from fear.

People have seen prices soar and they remain afraid that, unless they do more than catch up now, they will suffer grievously in future. That fear is the most understandable thing in the world but action based on it is a prescription for disaster.

Trudeau was effective on the problem when he spoke about it on Friday. He can be one of the world's most persuasive people when he takes the trouble to try. His message is not even frightening because it does not imply any real sacrifice. Trudeau is deeply convinced, as many of the rest of us are, that real living standards cannot rise as fast in future as they have in the past.

That is not so alarming because during the last 15 years or so they have risen at a rate never previously matched. Given some social mobility within the community, today's living standards are not at all bad and it is not a great disaster if they improve at a somewhat more normal rate—normal taken in the sense of long-term human experience.

They cannot increase at the old rate, for the time being at least, for two solid reasons and Trudeau cited both of them the other day. In the first place, the cost of energy has quadrupled on a world basis although in our own case the situation is not that bad. Our own energy costs will eventually, though, reach world levels.

His First Duty

The other lasting change arises from the fact that agriculture was a depressed industry for all of 20 years. Starting early in the 1970s, food prices rose, in many cases dramatically. Farm incomes rose as well, and not many would dispute the desirability of that. But if the improvement in farm incomes is to be lasting in real terms it follows that food will in future take a larger slice of urban incomes than in the past.

Canadians cannot control world energy costs and should not attempt to cut real farm incomes which are no more than at a decent level. That being so, more of our incomes inevitably will go on energy and food and that should be honestly translated as meaning that a larger percentage of real urban incomes will have to be spent that way for the foreseeable future.

That situation does, however, leave most people reasonably well off and there are a good many income transferral schemes which help the unfortunate. We have not achieved a just society, but we do make some progress at curbing social injustice.

Political leaders do not, however, achieve their ends by saying these things once then deciding the job is done. They have to work at leadership day after day, week after week, all the time they hold office. That is their first duty.

Stop the Strikes

Strikes, strikes, strikes! is all we ever see or hear in our papers, TV or radio. I, for one, am sick and tired of our gutless, do nothing government, our anemic businessmen and apathetic citizens.

It boggles my mind how a small group of union men can tie up a whole city, make everyone suffer and nothing is done about it. The outrageous salary settlements, and still to come demands, are beyond all comprehension.

While all this is happening our bumbling premier is blustering his way around the province. How the man has the gall to go before the Young Presidents Organization in Vancouver and tell them about sharing and social justice. As soon as elected he shared the taxpayer's money with himself, his elected officials and all government employees. That is where the spiral for higher and higher wages started.

I think it is time for legislation to curb the power of all unions and get everyone back to work. That time is now. So let's bring Barrett home to do some work and stop mouthing like a broken record.

Each and every citizen who feels as I do, should sit down, now, and write a note to the premier and or labor minister. All you need to say is: "Barrett go home and stop the strikes." In addition to that, telephone the premier, and labor minister's office leaving the same message. Phone the government every day or five times a day if the lines are open. If those two lines are busy, call any government line that is not busy and leave the same message for the premier. If you don't live in Victoria call whatever provincial government office is located in your town.

Let us fill up the mail bags and tie up the government telephones. Five thousand calls a day, just may get the message through. Let us be the activists Barrett said he would be if he was a Chicano or Black in the U.S. — A Very Irate Citizen.

Balanced Births

Starving populations breed indiscriminately.

Wartime youth, in the face of death, breed indiscriminately.

Ghetto populations breed children and crime indiscriminately.

Which is nature's way of assuring survival among the insecure, who are relegated to death, starvation and discrimination.

The way of resolving the spectres of population explosion is to achieve proper degrees of civilization that cause them to disappear naturally. — V. R. Cragg, 799 Byng Street.

60 YEARS AGO

From the Times of October 2, 1915

PARIS — An officer attached to the British staff who returned to Paris today said the Prince of Wales had a miraculous escape from death during the battle of Loos. The prince was speeding toward the front in an automobile when he ordered the driver to stop at the foot of a knoll which he climbed. From there he watched the progress of the fighting through binoculars. While he was standing on the hill, a shell landed on the car, destroying it and blowing the driver to pieces. Reproached with having run into danger, the prince replied: "Well I have plenty of brothers."

Man Denies Assault Charge

Martin John Kellington told a B.C. Supreme Court jury Wednesday it is "absolutely not true" that he forced a 17-year-old girl into his car at gunpoint and indecently assaulted her.

It was his final answer in cross-examination by crown counsel Brian Smith in the third day of his trial at the fall assizes.

Kellington, formerly of Victoria but now living in Kamloops, is accused of attempting to forcibly seize one girl, taking another girl against her will with intent to have illicit sexual intercourse and indecently assaulting the second girl.

POLICE SKETCH

The girl in the second two charges has testified that Kellington forced her at gunpoint into his car on Tillicum Road and later made her have oral intercourse with him.

Evidence was concluded Wednesday and Smith and defence counsel Mike Hutchison were to give their summations today followed by Mr. Justice Craig Munroe's charge to the jury.

Kellington put forward a defence of alibi and mistaken indentity.

He told the jury that on the evening of March 20 he was called for picket duty during a strike but when he reached the union hall he found this was not necessary.

He spent the next three hours at two pubs and a coffee shop and arrived home at 741 Violet at 10:25 p.m. and went to bed.

Kellington said he was wearing brown high laced boots and not unlaced black shoes as indicated by the crown.

He admitted he was expecting to be questioned by police because of the similarity in description between himself and the suspect the police sought.

Asked what he meant by a comment to police when they arrested him April 1 that "my wife knows all about this," he said he didn't want police to return to the house because it would upset his wife.

He denied ever having a firearm, drawing a gun on any woman, stopping on Tillicum Road, stopping two girls who were jogging, forcing one of them into his car and attempting to have illicit sexual intercourse.

Under cross-examination, he said it was his mother-in-law who, on a visit March 21, told him of a radio news report that a man with a moustache and a red Toyota had picked up a girl on Tillicum Road.

Asked why he didn't contact police if he felt he would be questioned, he replied "I didn't think of it."

His wife, Doris, told court he arrived home at 10:30 and denied it was around 11 p.m. as police claimed she said at the time. She expected him to be questioned because she had seen a police sketch of a suspect in the newspaper.

Mrs. Erma Schmidt, Kellington's mother-in-law, said she left the Edelweiss Club in James Bay after a choir practice at 10:10 p.m. March 20 and saw her son-in-law's car in the driveway of his home shortly before she got home two blocks away at 10:30 p.m.

She said she made the comment to Kellington about the radio news report the following day in joking fashion because it mentioned a man with a moustache and red Toyota.

William Clayton, Kellington's uncle, said his wife and the accused were drinking until 7:20 p.m. at one pub.

Both he and Mrs. Schmidt said Kellington didn't look like the police sketch.

Wendy Chapman, a family friend and Mrs. Kellington's supervisor at work, also said the police sketch wasn't like the accused.

But when shown a police mug shot of Kellington taken April 2 she agreed the hair, style and length were similar and that the photo truly depicted how he looked April 1 and 2.

Asked if that was how he looked around March 20, she said "I have never seen him look this scraggly. He looks more tired than usual."

Speedy Sailor Snaps Own Mark

WEYMOUTH, England (AFP) — Englishman Tim Colman steered his Malay two-hulled Proa "Crossbow" to another world speed yachting record Wednesday when he got his craft up to 31.9 knots.

Colman became the first yachtsman to break the 30-knot barrier at the annual trials off here Tuesday when he reached a speed of 31.09 knots.

'DEATH WITH DIGNITY' COMES AT LAST

LOMA LINDA, Calif. (UPI) — Chuck McCracken, who took himself off the kidney machine that kept him alive, waited almost three months to "die in dignity." But in the end death came unexpectedly.

McCracken, of San Bernardino, Calif., died Wednesday night at Loma Linda community hospital, 11 weeks and four days after he took himself off the artificial kidney machine. He was 37.

McCRACKEN

Blind and partially paralyzed from a kidney ailment and diabetes, McCracken said the dialysis treatments he needed were "sheer agony" and he wished "to die in dignity."

He had been ill for 24 years and even if he continued the treatments, doctors had warned him he would probably die in about a year.

"I don't believe a person should commit suicide," he said, but he believed God gave him the right to choose death in his own time over life dragged out by a machine.

"To be kept alive by doctors is not quite humane."

He was in and out of the hospital as his health slowly failed. He was readmitted Tuesday "so his family would not have to live with memories of his death in their home," a friend said.

All along he had expected to die of uremic poisoning, a lingering death preceded by slipping into a deepening coma. He expected to feel the approach of death — "twitching of nerves, drowsiness, nausea, a comatose state and then sleep," he once predicted.

While sitting in his hospital room Wednesday night, talking with his wife Barbara and two brothers, McCracken died of a heart seizure brought on by the strain of his condition.

He died within minutes, said his minister, the Rev. Bill Jolly.

McCracken's wife and four children, aged 9 to 14, shed no tears, the minister said. "They will miss him, but he had prepared his family so well, they appreciated that Chuck did what was right for him, and they are ready to go on with life.

"I saw no tears tonight."
